Half woman, half fish

The island of Lewis in the north west of Scotland has many beautiful beaches, with clear, light blue water and white sand. Most people say you can't swim in the sea there because it's too cold. However, a young woman called Kate Macleod disagrees.

Kate loves swimming in the sea around the island all year, even in winter. People say she is like a mermaid – a person from stories who is half woman and half fish. When she swims, she even looks like a mermaid! She has a special 'mermaid tail' which she wears over her feet and her legs. With her 'tail', she can't swim normally, so she swims under the water like a fish – or a mermaid. It's hard to swim like a mermaid but it's fun and you can swim fast. You put your arms in front of your face and move different parts of your body down and then up: first your chest, then your stomach, your legs and your feet.

Kate makes videos about swimming on her island, and she's famous on social media. She has also made TV programmes about the sea and the islands near her home. She thinks more people should try swimming outside in cold water because it can help you feel happy and calm. 'When you go into the sea you don't think about anything else,' she says. Of course, you don't have to wear a mermaid tail!
