I'm happy to hear that you're going to Florence for a couple of months to learn Italian. It's a wonderful city and I think that everybody visit it. I went there last year, so I can give you some tips. Have you already found a place to stay? You stay at a hotel because hotels are expensive. You check the notice board in your school to see if someone has a room to share. You also find a native speaker of Italian to exchange conversation in your spare time. If you haven't got a lot of money, you try some local street food – it's very tasty. Then, when it's sunny, you sit around in one of the many beautiful squares and relax. And you miss the ice cream – it's the best in the world. Florence has many things to see, but you forget to visit other Italian cities, too. Best wishes, Sarah

Is it a good idea to do homework over school breaks? 'Holidays are a time to relax. Kids (1) get a break from homework when they aren't at school,' says one parent. Some schools have abolished homework (2) the winter and spring holiday periods. 'If you want to do your homework well,' says the headteacher, 'you (3) concentrate and spend all your holiday time working. And we know that kids (4) have some time off schoolwork.' Other schools do not agree. 'We think students (5) practise all the time, if you don't want them to lose what they have learnt,' says a teacher. 'In many cases, if kids don't have anything to do at home, they (6) get bored. Also, homework (7) be an unpleasant task. In fact, it (8) be fun. This winter break my students (9) study in groups, interview people and write reports. Then, when they get back to school, (10) the 7th January, they'll give a presentation to the other groups.'
