Reading

10 Read the email about a TV cooking programme. Are these statements True (T), False (F) or is the information Not Mentioned (NM)?

Hi Mike,

Were you at home last night? There was a programme on TV that's really useful for our project on food. The programmes on Thursday nights aren't usually interesting, but I decided to watch for half an hour after my homework. I was very glad I did. It was one of those TV chef competitions, but this one was different. It had famous chefs in it and they had to make meals from food that people throw away! But it wasn't old, horrible food. It wasn't fresh, but it was still good enough to eat. They went to shops and street markets and looked in their rubbish bins. There was lots of bread that was only a day old and there was fruit – things like bananas and strawberries – that was a little brown, but still OK to eat.

They also showed how much good food people throw away at home. It's terrible. We waste a lot of food because we buy too much and then we can't eat it all. And they showed a farmer who can't sell a lot of his vegetables because they're too big or small. It was the same with fish and meat, too. People only want food that looks good. I couldn't believe it. Some shop owners threw good meat away on Friday because they knew they couldn't sell it all over the weekend.

I think we can do an interesting project about how people should plan carefully before they go shopping and shouldn't buy too much food. And we should suggest some ways to cook food that's a bit old but still OK to eat. What do you think? Watch the programme on your computer and we can talk about it at school.

11 Read the email again. Complete the summary with between one and three words in each gap.

The TV programme that Lyn watched was (1) from other programmes about cooking. The famous chefs didn't go shopping for food but found ingredients in (2) at shops and markets. Then they had to make meals from the old food they found. The programme also showed that lots of ordinary people buy too (3) food and then have to throw it away. Farmers sometimes grow vegetables that are too (4) so nobody wants to buy them. Lyn suggests that their project could teach people that it is a good idea to (5) before they shop and also show them (6) to make dishes with food that is not fresh but still OK to eat. She says Mike can watch the programme on his computer.
