attracted delivered dreadful
marvellous solve wasted

An enormous amount of food is <sup>1</sup> wasted by many households in the UK, while millions of people don't have enough to eat. Many organisations believe this is <sup>2</sup> dreadful and are trying to <sup>3</sup> solve the problem. One piece of advice is to order food online so that it is <sup>4</sup> delivered to your home and you only buy what you need instead of being <sup>5</sup> attracted by offers and unnecessary treats. Wouldn't it be <sup>6</sup> marvellous if nobody ever went hungry again?

Have you heard of the Moai of Easter Island? They are <sup>1</sup> enormous stone statues, over 10 metres tall, built centuries ago. I visited them last year on holiday. The views of the statues from the plane were <sup>2</sup> stunning, but it was <sup>3</sup> terrifying when we hit bad weather! Nobody is sure how the islanders were able to <sup>4</sup> create the statues, but researchers are starting to <sup>5</sup> develop a theory that they were built to show the islanders where to <sup>6</sup> collect fresh water. Such mysteries are <sup>7</sup> fascinating to me, and I love reading about them.
