Extension

8 Work in pairs. You own a new clothes shop in your town. Talk about the clothes you want to sell and who you want to buy them. Make a poster for your shop. Think about the following:

- the clothes
- who the clothes are for
- how your shop is special
- why people should visit your shop

9 Present your poster and shop to the class and then suggest that they come to the shop. Listen to other groups' presentations and decide which shop you want to go to. Use the key phrases for making suggestions and agreeing to and declining suggestions.

Making suggestions

Do you fancy ... ?
Why don't you ... ?
How about ... ?

Agreeing to and declining suggestions

Cool.
Yes, I'd love to.
No, thanks.
I'm afraid I can't.

DVD clip summary

This DVD clip is about traid, a charity shop and clothing manufacturer based in the UK.

Background

Most of the cheap clothes that people wear in the western world are made in developing countries like Bangladesh, Cambodia and Vietnam. The people who produce these clothes often work in very difficult conditions and are paid very little money. In addition, lots of polluting chemicals are used in the production of the cotton that is used to make these clothes.

traid is a charity that works to stop clothes from being thrown away. It believes our current obsession with buying cheap clothes is not sustainable. It has got a network of 1,500 clothes recycling banks where people can donate their old or unused clothes. The charity then takes these clothes and either sells them in their eleven charity shops in London or gets designers and clothes makers to turn them into new fashion items, which they sell through their traidremade brand.

They use the profits from their shops to educate people about the impact of textiles on the environment and people's lives, and also to help fund international development projects that work to improve the conditions of people working in the textile industry in developing countries.

Teens and their money

Teenagers spend their money on all kinds of things, like food, computer games and clothes. But this isn't easy because teenagers want fashionable clothes that are expensive. However, most teenagers don't have a lot of money.

This is a shop called traid in north London. The customers here today are shopping for clothes and accessories. But this shop doesn't sell new clothes. These clothes are second-hand.

Teenagers don't usually buy second-hand clothes because they are often old and boring, but traid sells its own brand of clothing called 'traidremade'. These trousers, shirts, skirts, jackets and shoes are different to normal old clothes. They're stylish and individual.

This is Zoe. She works for traid, but she isn't working in the shop; she's working 90 kilometres away in a studio in Brighton. 'My name is Zoe. I make clothes for traidremade and I live in Brighton.'

She makes new clothes from second-hand clothes. She's young and she knows what teenagers like, so she turns old, unfashionable clothes into stylish new outfits.

This smart shirt is now a dress and this man's formal shirt is now a new blouse. Zoe makes all kinds of clothes and they're always interesting. 'We make skirts and dresses and shirts, and for the winter we also make jumpers and sweatshirts.'

Today, Zoe is making some blue skirts from some old fabric. She's sewing the fabric together to create a short skirt. She really enjoys this part of her job and she often makes five new items of clothing every day. 'I like that I can spend all day sewing.'

For young people, new clothes are often expensive and old clothes are unfashionable, but traid offers new styles that aren't very expensive. So teenagers can look stylish and they don't need to spend much money.
