Going online

BEFORE READING

Answer the questions with a partner.

- 1 How often do you use the internet? What do you use it for?
- 2 How do you think the internet has changed people's lives?

READ

- 1 Match the titles with the paragraphs (A–E). You don't need to use one of the titles.

- | | |
|----------------------------------|--------------------------|
| 1 Choose carefully | 4 A world of information |
| 2 Watch and listen when you want | 5 A successful invention |
| 3 One man's invention | 6 Shopping around |

Making the INTERNET work for you

- A Although the internet has only been in existence for about 25 years, it is now an essential part of many people's lives. In some countries the internet has spread almost as fast as the telephone did when it was first introduced. So why has the internet become an indispensable tool for many students and businesses, and a source of entertainment for millions of users around the planet?
- B The internet is sometimes referred to as the 'information superhighway'. It rapidly transports users to sites around the globe that can help them carry out a task or research. Students have never had it easier and with the click of a button they can browse the online material of institutions as diverse as the Library in Alexandria, the British Museum in London or the Louvre museum in Paris. Online encyclopaedias and dictionaries, specialized websites and online newspaper archives all contribute to providing an enormous virtual library. It is a vast educational resource that no conventional library can compete with.
- C The internet has also created new opportunities for businesses, especially in the fields of advertising and sales. It is also very practical for the customer. A shopping trip in the past often meant a time-consuming visit to lots of shops, searching for what you wanted and at a reasonable price. Not any more. You can now browse the 'shelves' of lots of online shops from the comfort of your own home in the same time it takes you to visit just one real shop. You can even visit websites that allow you to compare the prices of the same product at various online stores. Shopping for books, DVDs and CDs has never been easier and quick delivery also means that you rarely have to wait long to receive what you've ordered.

Reading tip

Read the question carefully but don't look at the choices. Read the paragraph that the question refers to and think of a possible answer. Then read the four choices and if your answer is there, it is probably the right one. If your answer is not one of the choices, try to eliminate any answers that are obviously wrong.

2 1.02 Read the Reading tip. Choose the best answers.

- 1 Since its introduction, the internet has
 - a replaced the telephone in some countries.
 - b been used more by students than anyone else.
 - c quickly found users around the world.
 - d just been used for entertainment.
- 2 The educational material that you can find on the internet
 - a is superior in quality to the material found in a library.
 - b comes from a wide range of sources.
 - c comes from Alexandria, London and Paris.
 - d is written by students.

D Despite its short history, the internet has been evolving constantly. With the latest internet technology, users can visit social networking sites and access and share material with high quality sound and images. This has revolutionized home entertainment. Music and films can be bought and quickly downloaded, and many radio stations and TV channels have also made their programmes available to be streamed at any time. Furthermore, users can download podcasts of everything from films to university lectures, and watch or listen to them when and where they want.

E However, although the internet is continually growing, not everyone thinks it is for the better. In a book about the internet, expert Andrew Keen says the dramatic increase in websites and blogs has made it more and more difficult to find quality material. There is no directory to help us find good sites, so we often have to read a lot of poor-quality material before we find something useful. It is therefore essential that we accept the recommendations made by teachers and experts about the sites we should visit. In this way we can learn to establish our own criteria for deciding what makes a website good or bad and hopefully the internet will continue to be an excellent source of useful information and entertainment.

- 3 Because of the internet, online shopping
 - a is usually more expensive than normal shopping.
 - b has not been a success.
 - c is often time-consuming.
 - d allows you to compare prices.
- 4 Improvements in internet technology
 - a allow users to watch TV programmes at their convenience.
 - b have been slow in recent years.
 - c have not had an effect on TV or radio stations.
 - d have changed the way teachers teach in class.
- 5 The internet can help students
 - a catch up on the lectures they might miss.
 - b study less frequently.
 - c find websites for their teachers.
 - d find the questions that will be in their exams.
- 6 Andrew Keen thinks that
 - a blogs usually provide quality information.
 - b teachers should write an internet directory.
 - c the internet is a terrible invention.
 - d finding good material on the internet is a difficult task.

UNWANTED emails

The use of email ¹has been constantly growing and it isn't going to stop. Email ²is now much more popular than postal mail, but not just for messages. Most computer users ³have had email accounts for some time and they often find unwanted emails in their inboxes. These unwanted emails are advertisements that we call spam. While ⁴you are reading this text, thousands of them are travelling across the internet. 100 billion are sent every day! But how do the spammers get our email addresses? If you have ever given your address to an online shop or service then they found it there. But how can you stop it? If you buy things on the internet, use a separate email account for shopping. Also, you should install a program that stops spam. Software companies have been trying to stop spam for years and they have created new programs that stop a lot of it. The amount of spam that people receive is gradually going down thanks to these programs.

EXPLORE

- 1 1.04 Read and listen to the dialogue. Why did the ancient Greeks think writing was bad?

- Tom Have you finished your project yet?
 Andy Yes, I have. I wrote about the impact of new communication technology on society and what people say about new inventions. For example, is writing a good thing?
 Tom Of course!
 Andy Well, when people started writing 2000 years ago the ancient Greeks said they'd lose the ability to remember things if they wrote them down! Since then every new system of communication has been criticised for being ridiculous or dangerous.
 Tom Like the internet?
 Andy Exactly. When the internet first became widely available in the 1990s a lot of people just talked about the negative aspects of it. But there's always a good side and a bad side to new inventions.

WRITING

An opinion essay

READ

Read the essay and decide what function each paragraph (A–D) performs.

- Paragraph _____ gives further points in support of the writer's point of view.
- Paragraph _____ briefly reaffirms the writer's opinion.
- Paragraph _____ establishes the topic and lets the reader know what the essay is about.
- Paragraph _____ provides the main argument in support of the writer's opinion.

Does the internet unite or divide?

- A The internet has quickly become part of people's everyday lives. It has changed the way millions of people work and look for information. Furthermore, it is developing into a form of entertainment and today a lot of young people prefer using the internet to watching TV. However, in my view the biggest impact it has made is on people's relationships.
- B Firstly, the people who have most benefited from the internet are people who live abroad, whether for educational or professional reasons. For example, they are regularly able to keep in touch with their friends and families back home thanks to the internet. What's more, as well as writing emails, they can send and receive photos and videos, use webcams and make free international phone calls.
- C In addition to that, there has been a big increase in the number of social network sites where people exchange information with old friends and new virtual friends. Apart from that, people with hobbies can get in touch with people who share their interests. Lastly, users with a lot to say about something can even write their own blogs and exchange views with people all over the planet.
- D To conclude, in my opinion the internet unites people. So the next time you see someone sitting alone in front of a computer screen, remember they're probably doing what people have always done: chatting.

action woman

Young Kira Salak is an explorer with a mission. She wants to find the undiscovered corners of our planet. A difficult task, you might think, in the age of GPS technology and Google™ maps. However, according to Kira there are still plenty of new places to visit and new adventures to experience. What is more, Kira prefers to travel alone unlike the famous explorers of the past, who would set off with an enormous team of helpers.

But what makes a young woman leave her studies and family at the age of 19 to go on dangerous journeys across scorching deserts, through dense jungles and along fast-flowing rivers? Kira explains that as a teenager she used to suffer from low self-esteem. She thought solo adventure trips would help her to discover what she could do. She was right.

For her first adventure, Kira decided to go backpacking across southern Africa. In spite of the hardships of the journey, the trip had been going well until she went to Mozambique. This was a country that was in the middle of a civil war. She was travelling near the border with Zimbabwe when she was kidnapped by soldiers from Mozambique and taken to their base. Despite the frightening situation, Kira kept calm and asked if she could go to the toilet. It was her opportunity to escape and she fled into the night, running all the way back to the Zimbabwean border and safety.

After such an experience, most people would be put off exploring for life. Kira, however, had learned a valuable lesson about herself: she was braver and stronger than she had realized. With her new self-confidence she planned more trips. She wanted to visit somewhere that very few travellers had been to. The destination she chose was Papua New Guinea. This was considered one of the most difficult islands in the world to cross because of its thick jungle and difficult waterways. That didn't stop Kira. She cut through the jungle and canoed her way across the island to become one of the few visitors to complete the journey, and the first foreign woman to do it.

These days Kira's family and friends are used to her going off on long expeditions. Since her trip to Papua New Guinea, she has travelled across Alaska, Bhutan, the Congo, Mali, Peru, Mexico and the Himalayas. She is always searching for hidden, unexplored corners to tell people about. Kira has recorded her travel experiences in newspaper and magazine articles and a number of novels. In fact, as well as being a respected adventurer, she is also considered an accomplished travel writer and she has been presented with various awards for her writing. To most of us it all sounds incredible, but Kira says that travelling shows us that no culture is better, or worse, than another. She also adds that the majority of people on the planet want the same things: peace, happiness and a good life for their children.

2 🎧 1.09 Read the text again. Decide if the sentences are true or false.

- 1 Kira finished her studies before leaving on her first expedition.
- 2 Kira was lacking in confidence as a teenager.
- 3 Kira panicked when she was captured by the soldiers.
- 4 Travelling hasn't helped Kira change as a person.
- 5 Kira's family and friends are not surprised by her adventures any more.
- 6 Kira has done well as an author.

EXPLORE

- 1 Read the interview. How many different animals did Kevin see?

Presenter Today we've got young explorer Kevin Banks in the studio. So, you've just got back from the Antarctic.

Kevin Yes, I have. I went on a young explorers' expedition for a month.

Presenter Why the Antarctic?

Kevin Well, I'd studied a lot about Antarctic wildlife at university, but I'd only ever seen the animals in 2005.

Presenter But there can't be that many animals to see there.

Kevin More than people think! We'd been travelling on the ship for only an hour when we saw a group of whales: an incredible sight! The scenery was amazing. When we were approaching the Antarctic we saw enormous icebergs floating in the sea.

Presenter So what did you do when you arrived?

Kevin We visited a penguin colony but we nearly got too close to them! I was taking some photos when a seal suddenly flew out of the water and onto the ice and grabbed a couple of penguins for lunch!

Presenter Wow, that sounds amazing!

Past habits and situations

EXPLORE

- 1 Which of the following is the most important for survival on an adventure? Read the text and check your answers.

good equipment a good mentality good food good clothes

Survival experts used to believe that training for an expedition should focus on equipment and survival skills. Survival trainers would give advice on what action to take in difficult situations and they used to teach such things as how to build an emergency shelter. However, recent studies have shown that the most important thing in survival is a person's mentality. In one study it was discovered that people who often complained about their bad luck had less chance of surviving than their more positive companions. The study said that people do better when they see a challenge as an opportunity to demonstrate what they are capable of.

- 2 Read the Learn this! box. Are the words in blue in the text past habits or past situations?

LEARN THIS!

• Past habits

We use the past simple to talk about past habits and repeated actions with expressions such as always, often, every day, usually:

*He usually arrived late for the training sessions.
They played tennis every weekend.*

We can use both used to and would to talk about past habits and repeated actions. would refers to typical past behaviour, while used to emphasises a habit or routine that no longer happens.

When we were on holiday, we would get up early every day and spend all day on the beach.

I used to cycle everywhere when I was younger. (= but I don't cycle much now)

• Past situations

We use used to when talking about situations and states in the past. We can't use would in this way:

Jack used to live in Manchester.

Mr Taylor used to be an actor.

My dad used to have a motorbike.

- 3 Which example of used to in the text cannot be replaced by would? Why?

EXPLOIT

- 1 There are mistakes in four of the sentences. Find the mistakes and correct them.

- We would have a dog but it died two years ago.
We used to have a dog but it died two years ago.
- Mum always made sandwiches for us for our school lunches.
- Maria used to have an important meeting with her boss last week.
- Anne would live in Istanbul when she worked in Turkey.
- I would go to bed early and read adventure books when I was a child.
- My brother always cycled to school.
- My grandmother often cooked pizzas for all the family.
- My uncle would be overweight but now he's lost six kilos.

LOOK OUT!

used to and be used to

Used to is followed by an infinitive and only refers to past habits and situations.

I used to travel every summer.

Be used to is followed by an -ing form and refers to habits and situations that we became or have become familiar with:

When I lived in London, I was used to driving on the left.

He's studied Arabic for five years now and he's used to writing from right to left.

WRITING

A narrative

READ

- 1 Read the story. Do you think Simon Yates did the right thing?

- A In 1985 two young mountaineers, Joe Simpson and Simon Yates, decided to climb the Siula Grande Mountain in Peru. After only a week, Joe and Simon had successfully conquered it. Standing on the summit, they felt proud of their achievement. However, the real adventure had not yet started.
- B While they were coming down the mountain, Joe suddenly fell and broke his leg. After the accident, the two climbers tied themselves to each other with a rope and Simon helped Joe down the mountain. Joe, however, fell again but this time over the mountain edge. He was hanging in mid-air! Simon held on for as long as he could, but he knew he had a terrible decision to make: cut the rope and let his friend fall to his death or stay tied to it and die with him. With a shaking hand, Simon started cutting...
- C Afterwards, Simon continued down the mountain and arrived exhausted at the tent they had left in the valley. As soon as he got into his sleeping bag, he fell fast asleep. On his third night in the tent he thought he heard someone shouting his name. Was he having a nightmare? The shouting continued and he left the tent. Lying over some rocks, he found Joe's broken body.
- D Joe Simpson had been lucky and had fallen unexpectedly onto soft snow. After that, he had used his arms to pull himself down the mountain. He was freezing, starving and in need of urgent medical attention but he was alive! He'd had an amazing escape and he thanked his friend. Simon's decision to cut the rope had saved both their lives.

- 2 Match the paragraphs (A–D) with the descriptions (1–4).

- 1 It shows how one of the main characters resolved the problem and provides a positive finish.
- 2 It gives us the location and sets the scene for what happens.
- 3 It describes an important event that happened to the main characters.
- 4 It describes what one of the characters did after the event and it provides an unexpected turning point.

PREPARE

- 1 Read the Writing tip. Find examples of sequencing clauses in the text.

Writing tip: sequencing clauses

Sequence words and expressions are used to show the order of events in a narrative

- When one action follows another quite quickly we can use:
after + -ing / noun
After leaving the cinema, we went to have a pizza.
After the class, we had a discussion on Greek philosophers.
afterwards / after that
We left the cinema. After that / Afterwards, we went home.
- When two actions happen at the same time we can use:
as soon as or when / while
As soon as I arrived, I did my homework.
When / While we were talking, I suddenly remembered it was his birthday.

- 2 Rewrite the sentences using a sequencing clause and the words in brackets.

- 1 We were crossing the desert. There was a sandstorm. (while)
- 2 Our boat sank. We were rescued by a fishing boat. (afterwards)
- 3 I walked into the jungle. I stood on a snake. (as soon as)
- 4 They found a cave. They sheltered from the storm. (after)
- 5 They found the river. They were walking through the jungle. (when)
- 6 We flew to Peru. We visited Lima. (after that)

WRITE

- 1 Think of a past event that you have taken part in. Use these ideas to help you:

an accident a family / school trip a personal achievement a sporting event

- 2 Before you start, answer these questions:

- Who were you with?
- When and where did it take place?
- How did you feel?
- What happened?
- What were the consequences?
- Did you learn anything from the experience?

- 3 Organize your notes from exercise 2. Use the writing plan to help you. Write your narrative.

Paragraph 1	Background information.
Paragraph 2	Describe the event.
Paragraph 3	The response to the event.
Paragraph 4	The final outcome.

LITERATURE CORNER 1

Jane Eyre

by Charlotte Brontë

Biography

Charlotte Brontë was born in 1816 in the north of England. Charlotte and her sisters studied at boarding school. However, the terrible school conditions, which she described in Jane Eyre, seriously affected her health and contributed to the death of two of her sisters. Later Charlotte worked as a teacher and a governess but like her sisters Emily and Anne, she wanted to write for a living. In the 1840s they all published their first novels and became famous authors.

I was woken by the full moon shining in on me, as I had forgotten to draw my curtains. Suddenly, a wild, terrible cry broke the silence, echoing throughout the house. My heart missed a beat. What could it mean? It came from the top floor. Then I heard the sounds of a desperate struggle, just above my room.

'Help! Help! Help! Won't anyone help me? Rochester! Rochester! For God's sake, come!' shouted a voice from upstairs.

Bedroom doors were opened as the guests woke up. 'What's happening?' 'Fetch a candle!' 'Is it a fire?' 'Are there burglars?' 'Where's Rochester? He isn't in his room!'

'Here I am!' called the master of the house, descending with a candle from the top floor. 'It's all right. Don't be afraid, ladies. A servant's had a bad dream, that's all, and started screaming. Nothing to worry about. Please go back to your rooms. You'll catch cold otherwise.' And so he calmed his guests and persuaded them to return to their rooms.

But I knew the sounds I had heard could have nothing to do with a servant's dream. So I dressed and waited in my room, in case I was needed. After about an hour, when Thornfield Hall was completely silent again, there was a cautious knock on my door.

'Are you awake, Jane?' asked the voice I had been expecting.

'Yes, sir, and dressed.'

'Good, I need you. Come and help me. Bring a clean cloth with you.' We went quietly up to the top floor, where he unlocked one of the small black doors.

'Do you feel faint at the sight of blood?' he asked.

'I don't think so,' I replied. We entered a room with curtains hung on the walls. One of the curtains was tied back to reveal a secret door into another small room. From there came an angry growling sound, almost like a dog.

- 1 Read the text. Where do you think the story is set? What is the narrator's name?

- 2 1.16 Read the text again and answer the questions.

- What caused Jane to wake up?
- Who asks if there is a fire?
- Who sleeps on the top floor?
- Why does Jane get dressed?
- How was the secret door hidden?

- 3 Look at the text, and use your own words and ideas to answer these questions.

- Do you think Jane is a guest or a worker at Thornfield Hall? Why?
- Why do you think Jane knew the sounds had nothing to do with a servant's dream?
- Why do you think Mr Rochester wants to calm the guests at Thornfield Hall?

- 4 Imagine you are Jane or Mr Rochester standing at the secret door that leads into the small room. Describe your feelings as you enter the room and give details about what you find. What is the room like? Where does the angry growling sound come from? What happens next?

SKILLS ROUND-UP 1-2

Scotland

READ

- 1 Read the text quickly. How many inventions are mentioned?

A NATION OF INVENTORS

What do you think of when you hear the word Scotland? The Loch Ness monster? The beautiful mountains in the Highlands? Well, all these things form part of the image people have of the country but perhaps we should think of Scotland as the land of inventors. With a population of just over 5 million people, Scotland has probably produced more inventors than any other country in the world.

Scots have revolutionized the world of communications. In 1843 Alexander Bain produced the first fax machine, but it was the inventions of Alexander Graham Bell and John Logie Baird's inventions that really made an impact on the public. Bell had spent years creating devices to help deaf people, before moving to the USA and in 1876 inventing the machine that was to make him world famous: the telephone. Baird was the first scientist to produce moving pictures and in 1925 he gave a demonstration of his television system. The BBC then used Baird's system in 1928 to broadcast the world's first TV programme.

Scots have also made important contributions to medicine. In 1847 James Young Simpson, a doctor, discovered that the chemical chloroform puts people to sleep. He experimented on himself to find the correct quantity of chloroform for operations. And one of the greatest medical discoveries of all time was made by a scientist from the west of Scotland: Alexander Fleming. Fleming was investigating different types of bacteria in his laboratory when he accidentally discovered a group of antibiotics called 'penicillin'. That was in 1929 and since then, penicillin has saved millions of people's lives.

Today Scottish universities are involved in important research in fields such as medicine, engineering and science.

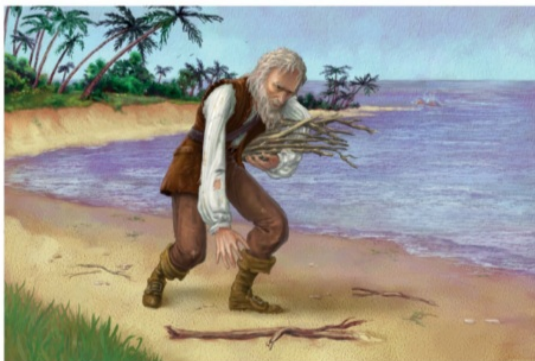

- 2 Read the text again. Are the sentences true or false?

YES, WE CAN!

Esther Vergeer from Holland

When 8-year-old Esther Vergeer suddenly lost consciousness after a swimming lesson, she can't have imagined the nightmare that was awaiting her; two years of operations that left her without the use of her legs. When she was finally able to leave hospital, she had to use a wheelchair. Once she was home, Esther slowly realized she could either feel sorry for herself or she could make the most of her new life. She decided to take the second option.

Wheelchair sports helped Esther to start enjoying life again. She immediately stood out as an all-round sportswoman but she decided to focus on just one sport: tennis. It was an intelligent move because she has been the world's number one player ever since and has an impressive number of Paralympic gold medals.

When Esther began playing sport many people may have thought it was just a chance for her to socialize with other young people. However, with her talent and strong motivation to succeed she has become an Olympic star.

William Kamkwamba from Malawi

In 2002, 14-year-old William Kamkwamba was told that his school days were over. His parents couldn't continue paying his school fees because drought had destroyed the family farm. However, William was determined that his new situation wasn't going to shatter his dream of one day providing his family's home with electricity and fresh water.

William studied library books at home and one of them, Using Energy, gave him the idea that transformed his life: designing and building a windmill.

- 6 Thanks to Amir's success, young British Asians
- have become more active.
 - went to the 2004 Olympic games.
 - have taken up mainstream education.
 - have won more sports competitions.

Reading tip

Learn to distinguish between facts and opinions. A fact can be proven with evidence, but opinions only show people's personal feelings about things.

3 Read the Reading tip. Are the following statements from the text fact or opinion?

- She can't have imagined the nightmare that was awaiting her.
- His parents couldn't continue paying his school fees.
- Amir Khan was born in England to Pakistani parents.
- Amir's father must have been desperate to take such a step.

UNDERSTANDING IDEAS

Answer the questions. Look at the text, and use your own words and ideas.

- Which of the three young people do you admire the most? Why?
- How do you think the things that they have done might motivate other young people?
- What personal qualities do you think Esther, William and Amir have?
- How do you motivate yourself to do something?

Using tree branches and old tractor and bicycle parts, William started constructing a windmill that would generate electricity. His neighbours thought he was crazy until the day he connected a cable from the windmill to his home. With the flick of a switch his house became the only one in the village with electric light.

Since then William has built more windmills in the village and installed an electric water pump. William's talent for engineering has made him famous. A group of business people, impressed by his skills and self-motivation, decided to pay for his education at an elite school in South Africa. However, William hasn't forgotten his compatriots and he says that when he has finished studying he wants to bring electricity to all Malawi.

Amir Khan from England

Amir Khan was born in England to Pakistani parents and from the moment he could walk it was clear that he was hyperactive. Unfortunately, his hyperactivity would get him into fights at school and his father decided he needed to do something about it. At the age of only eight, Amir's father made him become a member of a boxing club.

Amir's father must have been desperate to take such a step but time has shown that he was right. Young Amir used up all his energy at the gym, got on better at school and started winning boxing titles. By the time he was 17 he had won the European championships and a silver medal at the 2004 Olympic Games.

Amir's success has made a big impact on young people in Britain, especially on those from an Asian background. By overcoming a difficult start, he has inspired them.

His pride in being British and Asian has motivated lots of young British Asians to take up mainstream sport.

Modals: advice, obligation and prohibition

EXPLORE

- 1 Read the advice on self-motivation. Do you do any of the things that are recommended?

When a teacher tells his students that they have to do homework, they are sometimes motivated by external factors such as punishment. However, the experts say we ought to be motivated by our own desire to do well because this is the best form of motivation. But how? Read the following tips!

BE POSITIVE. You must focus on the positive things you have done. List them and you'll be surprised how many there are! Of course, you mustn't forget your mistakes. You should try to learn from them.

HAVE AN OBJECTIVE. Objectives don't have to be big to be effective. Completing small objectives gives you a sense of achievement and you'll be ready for bigger challenges.

MAKE A PLAN. To achieve goals you need to prepare a plan. A plan is really a set of smaller objectives. It needn't be very long but it will help you to move in the right direction.

- 2 Look at the modal verbs in blue and match them with the definitions below. Use some of the definitions with more than one modal verb.

1 It isn't necessary.	1 _____	2 _____
2 It's a recommendation.	3 _____	4 _____
3 It's a prohibition.	5 _____	6 _____
4 It's an obligation or necessity.	7 _____	8 _____

must and have to

Must and have to are both used to express obligation. When we decide an obligation for ourselves, we usually use must.

I must study this weekend if I want to pass the exam.
We must visit our grandfather. He hasn't been well.

When the obligation comes from other people or organizations, then we often use have to:

The teacher said we have to do an exam this afternoon.
Motorcyclists have to wear a helmet.

- 2 Complete the sentences with the correct forms of have to or must.

- We're going to China next month but first we have to get a visa from the embassy to enter the country.
- I _____ get fit if I want to run in next year's marathon.
- Cars can't turn right here. You _____ go straight on.
- Dad doesn't like his job. He _____ work late every night.
- I really _____ stop eating cake. It's bad for my teeth.
- We _____ clean the car this weekend. It's filthy!

LOOK OUT!

mustn't and don't have to

Although must and have to refer to obligation, mustn't and don't have to are very different in meaning.

You mustn't speak when the headmaster is here. = It is prohibited. You are not allowed to do it.

You don't have to speak at the meeting. = It is not necessary to do it. You can if you want to.

- 3 Complete the sentences with the correct forms of mustn't and don't have to.

- There's lots of time before class. We don't have to go yet.
- I'm sorry, but you _____ eat in the classroom. You can't eat in school buildings.
- Mum, you _____ cook lunch. I've already done it.
- I can clean the car alone. You _____ help me.
- Children, you _____ tell lies! You must always tell the truth!

LEARN THIS!

We use the modal verbs must, could, may, might and can't with the infinitive of the verb to be to speculate about the present:

Dad must be at his office.

Ann could be at her friend's house.

We use the modal verbs must, could, may, might and can't with have and the past participle of the verb to speculate about the past:

David might have missed the train.

They can't have been in Paris last week.

WRITING

An anecdote

READ

- 1 Read the anecdote. How did the grandmother's advice affect the writer?

The right attitude!

Walking home from school the other day, I started thinking about all the homework I had to do. I must have had at least three hours work ahead of me, and I wasn't looking forward to it. When I finally walked through the front door, I had put myself into a very bad mood.

However, I found my grandmother sitting in our kitchen and I soon brightened up. She had decided to make a surprise visit and we quickly started chatting about family gossip. It wasn't long though before I remembered my homework and, with a sad look on my face, I explained that I had to go off to my bedroom to study. I stood up to leave the kitchen like someone being sent off to prison.

Before I could leave, my grandmother angrily called me back. 'What's all this about?' she asked. 'You should change your attitude! Homework is a chance to learn, not a punishment!'

She then told me all about her childhood. School had been out of the question as she had had to work from dawn to dusk helping on the family farm. Education had been just a dream. Leaving the kitchen, I realised how hard life must have been for my grandmother and how lucky I was that I didn't have to go out to work!

- 2 Answer the questions about the story.

- 1 How does the writer feel at the beginning of the story?
- 2 How do her feelings change when she sees her grandmother?
- 3 What impression does the writer give her grandmother as she is leaving the kitchen?
- 4 How does her grandmother react?
- 5 What changes might the writer have made since that day?

Writing tip: using present participles

We sometimes use present participles to replace sentences that begin with while, when, as, since and because. We can only use this structure when the two subjects in the original sentence refer to the same person or thing:

While I was walking home from school the other day, I started thinking about all the homework I had to do.

Walking home from school the other day, I started thinking about all the homework I had to do.

If a sentence has two different subjects we can't begin it with a present participle.

When John arrived in the classroom, Bob told him the news.

Read the Writing tip. Rewrite the sentences using present participles. Two of the sentences can't be changed.

- 1 Because I disagreed with team tactics, I had to speak to the captain.
Disagreeing with team tactics, I had to speak to the captain.
- 2 While she was swimming in the pool, she hurt her foot.
- 3 When the speaker finished, I congratulated her.
- 4 Because I trained hard, I got back on the team.
- 5 Since we were living in London for six months, we had a chance to practise our English.
- 6 As he doesn't come to training, the coach wants him to leave the team.
- 7 When he finished the race, he quickly drank a bottle of water.
- 8 While I cooked lunch, I listened to the radio.

WRITE

- 1 How you ever received good advice from a relative or friend?

Answer the following questions and make notes.

- Who gave you the advice?
- When did you receive the advice?
- What was the advice about?
- How did you react to the advice? Were you surprised / shocked / pleased, etc.?
- Did the advice motivate you to change the way you did something?

- 2 Organize your notes into four paragraphs.

- | | |
|-------------|--------------------------------------|
| Paragraph 1 | Explain the situation. |
| Paragraph 2 | Explain what the problem was. |
| Paragraph 3 | Explain the advice given. |
| Paragraph 4 | Explain how the advice affected you. |

AN ECOLOGIST'S DREAM

Some predictions about climate change suggest that global warming will make the central regions of the planet uninhabitable. This has prompted one country to accept the challenge of building a sustainable city in the desert of the Arabian Peninsula. To find out more about this ambitious plan, our reporter Tom Davies spoke to project engineer Ahmed Moussa.

Tom Davies (TD): The Arabian Peninsula is one of the planet's harshest environments. Why here?

Ahmed Moussa (AM): Well, the Arabian Peninsula is home to the United Arab Emirates, a country whose citizens have the biggest carbon footprint in the world. A carbon footprint is a measure of the amount of carbon dioxide that is produced by our daily use of energy and people in the UAE have even bigger carbon footprints than the North Americans. The country is an economic success story but the residents realize they can't continue consuming natural resources at the same rate.

TD: So what is the UAE going to do to improve this?

AM: The government of the UAE's largest emirate, Abu Dhabi, has started work on a 'green' city. The city will only use energy supplied by solar panels and other renewable energy sources and it won't produce either carbon dioxide or rubbish.

TD: It sounds like an ecologist's dream! What's the name of this city?

AM: Masdar. A good choice, as it is the Arabic word for 'source'.

TD: But is the desert the right place to build a city like this?

AM: Yes, I think so. Naturally, the Masdar planners have taken into account the location of their project. The city is going to be walled to keep out the hot desert wind, and the narrow streets will be shaded to keep them cool.

TD: And how will the city provide its residents with the water they need?

AM: Water will come from a solar energy powered desalination plant and waste water will be recycled and reused for crop irrigation. Masdar will need 60% less water than a conventional city of the same size.

Reading tip

When you are answering questions on an interview, quickly scan the interviewee's responses for the key words (names, dates, etc.) that appear in the questions in the exercise.

1  1.25 Read the text and the Reading tip. Choose the best answers.

- The project in the Arabian Peninsula will
 - cause changes to the climate.
 - avoid causing damage to the environment.
 - be carried out by all the countries in the region.
 - build a city under the desert.
- At present, the citizens of the United Arab Emirates
 - can't use natural resources.
 - don't produce rubbish.
 - are aware of their carbon footprint.
 - don't use large amounts of energy.
- The government of Abu Dhabi
 - is already building an ecological city.
 - makes solar panels.
 - is the world's biggest energy user.
 - is considering plans for an ecological city.
- The planners of Masdar city will
 - use the desert wind to cool the city.
 - use water transport.
 - build narrow streets for cars only.
 - protect the city from the local climate.

- When construction is finished, Masdar will
 - become home to companies interested in improving the environment.
 - be controlled by the university.
 - be home to 50,000 university students.
 - have a high carbon footprint at the beginning.
- Supporters of the project think Masdar
 - will become a world leader in education.
 - is a chance for Abu Dhabi to be a world leader in the field of green cities.
 - will solve all environmental problems.
 - has lots of natural gas and oil.

2 Decide if the sentences are true or false.

- Some experts claim that people will not be able to live in certain parts of the world.
- Walls will stop the desert sand entering the city.
- They will use waste water to grow food.
- The sun will be the only source of energy for the new city.
- Students are already attending classes at the university.
- Masdar could become the capital city of the UAE.

UNDERSTANDING IDEAS

Answer the questions. Look at the text, and use your own words and ideas.

- Would you like to live in a city like Masdar? Why / Why not?
- Why do you think a country like the United Arab Emirates, that has natural resources such as gas and oil, is interested in renewable energy?
- How important do you think the Masdar Institute of Science and Technology will be for the city?
- Do you think other countries will follow the example of Abu Dhabi and build cities like Masdar?

VOCABULARY

An ecologist's dream

Match the highlighted words in the text with these definitions.

- Not possible for humans to live in.
- A way of describing the size, amount, etc. of something.
- Different from what is usual or traditional.
- Using natural energy and products that don't harm the environment.
- To study one particular subject.
- Doubting that something is right.
- The removal of salt from sea water.
- Successful applications to become members of a course, university etc.
- Most difficult for people to bear.
- Normal and ordinary.
- Providing water to grow plants and crops.
- The people who live in a place.
- That can be replaced naturally.
- Protected from direct light.
- Made someone decide to do something.

●●●●● Workbook: page 28

TD: Of course, cars are a big cause of pollution. How will the residents of Masdar get around?

AM: Well, cars will have no place in Masdar and citizens will be encouraged to move around on the Personal Rapid Transit system.

TD: So when will the city welcome its first inhabitants?

AM: Construction will have finished by 2014, when it is hoped that 50,000 inhabitants will be living and working there.

TD: And how will the inhabitants earn a living?

AM: Most companies in the city are going to specialize in environmentally-friendly products. Furthermore, research into alternative energy, sustainability and the environment is going to take place at the Masdar Institute of Science and Technology. This university is already accepting enrolments from future students.

TD: Now some people who are sceptical about the project have suggested that Masdar will make little difference to Abu Dhabi's high carbon footprint. What do you say to that?

AM: Masdar will not solve all the problems but it's a step in the right direction. Supporters of the project see it as an opportunity for Abu Dhabi to become the global capital of sustainable living and to offer a positive alternative for all cities of the future, not just for Masdar.

TD: Thank you, Ahmed Moussa. Good luck with the project!

Talking about the future

EXPLORE

- 1 Read the dialogue. What tenses are used to talk about the future?

Lily What are you doing next week?

Sam I'm going to visit the Home of the Future exhibition to do some research for my project.

Lily When does it start?

Sam On Thursday. It's on for four days. But one company is making a presentation on a teenager's bedroom of the future on Saturday morning so I'm going then.

Lily It sounds interesting. I think I'll come with you.

Sam Great! I think it'll be good fun! We should go early because they've sold lots of tickets and it's going to be busy.

Lily I'll meet you there at 9 o'clock. I'll bring some sandwiches for lunch.

LEARN THIS!

Future tenses

There are different ways of talking about the future in English. The tense you use depends on the situation.

Arrangements: We use the present continuous to talk about something that we have already arranged to do, often with other people.

Plans: We use going to with an infinitive to talk about personal plans that we have decided to do.

Timetables: We use the present simple to talk about events that have been timetabled.

Spontaneous decisions: We use will to talk about decisions made at the moment of speaking.

Offers and promises: We use will to make offers and promises.

Predictions: We use both will and going to to make predictions. We often use the verbs believe, expect, hope, think, etc. when we make predictions with will.

Going to is used to make predictions based on the present evidence that you have.

- 2 Read the Learn this! box. Are the following statements arrangements, plans, timetables, spontaneous decisions, promises or predictions?

- Wait, I'll help you carry that!
- I'm going to watch the football on TV tonight.
- Mark is meeting us at the cinema at 7.
- It's going to rain! I think we'll get soaked!
- The concert starts at 9.15 p.m.
- We've run out of time - we'll finish this tomorrow.

A Yes, I study medicine.
B Yes, I'm going to study medicine.
- I've got some difficult maths homework to do tonight.
A I'll help you with it. B I'm going to help you with it.
- Where's your brother going tomorrow?
A He's got an interview for a job at 10 o'clock.
B He'll have an interview for a job at 10 o'clock.

LOOK OUT!

Present continuous or going to + infinitive

The present continuous is used with a future time expression to talk about the near future. It's often used when we say who we are doing something with, and where and when:

I'm playing tennis with Kate at the sports club at 7 o'clock.

Going to + infinitive is often used when we talk about personal intentions and plans that we've made:

I've decided that I'm going to study Chinese.

- 2 Which tense, the present continuous or going to + infinitive, would be more likely in each situation? Complete the sentences with the correct form of the verb in brackets.

- I'm going to climb (climb) Mount Everest next year.
- All the students are _____ (have) lunch together tomorrow to discuss the situation.

GRAMMAR

Future continuous and future perfect

EXPLORE

- 1 Look at the picture. What differences can you see between your school and the proposed school of the future?
- 2 Read the text. How will schools be different in 2020?

Education experts say that by the year 2020, the classroom whiteboard will be a thing of the past.

Most schools will have installed interactive whiteboards. In fact, teachers and students will be using them to follow live experiments and participate in debates with other schools as well as study interactive materials. The experts also say tablet computers will have replaced pens, notebooks and course books. These computers allow the user to write on them and save their material. Although they are currently expensive, technology experts say prices of tablet computers will soon be falling.

YESTERDAY | LAST WEEK | LAST MONTH | LAST YEAR

Robert Corrigan

The Student Times blog

My big move!

A How is everybody? Sorry I haven't added an entry until today but I've been really busy with all my final exams at school. It's been hectic but I've managed to get through them. What about all of you out there? By the time you read this, you'll have finished! Let me know!

B Actually, I'm not writing to talk about the past. I want to talk about the future! I must say mine is looking good at the moment because I've got a place at the Masdar Institute of Science and Technology in Abu Dhabi to study sustainable energy (click on the link - it's incredible!). There was a lot of competition for places but the interview I had in London went well and I got the exam results I needed!

C Now I've got to get on with planning my move to the UAE! Can anyone tell me about life there? I'm going to be living on the new campus in Masdar once I arrive. A lot of the university buildings won't be finished yet and they won't have finished building the city until 2014. But that's part of the attraction. Masdar is going to be a model ecological city and I'll be able to get fantastic practical experience as they build the city around me while I'm studying. Come and visit me!

D Anyway, I'm not going to Masdar until I've spent a couple of months working at an engineering company this summer. So how about a Student Times bloggers meeting to catch up before we all go off to start university? Depending on numbers, someone could organize a meal in London. Any volunteers?

Don't forget to write an entry and tell the Student Times blog about your big plans for next year!

2 Read the blog again and find examples of the following:

- 1 phrasal verbs
- 2 questions to create a conversational style
- 3 imperative forms
- 4 adverbs often found in conversation to introduce a change of topic.

PREPARE

Writing tip: time clauses

Time clauses in the future are usually followed by the present simple. We use a number of words to introduce them: after, as soon as, before, by the time, once, until and when.

He is meeting Pete when he gets to Sydney.

The present perfect is used when we want to show that one thing will be completed before another.

I'll telephone you as soon as I've finished dinner.

Read the Writing tip. Join the sentences with the words in brackets to make a new sentence. Use the present simple or the present perfect in the time clauses. Sometimes both are possible.

- 1 I'll search all the university websites. I'll find the course I want to do. (until)
I'll search all the university websites until I find the course I want to do.
- 2 We'll finish all our revision. We'll watch TV. (as soon as)
- 3 We'll arrive at the campus. I'll show you the new science centre. (when)
- 4 I'll save enough money. I'm going to buy a bicycle. (once)
- 5 I'll buy a ticket. I'll leave for the UAE. (after)
- 6 Mark will be studying abroad. He will come home to start his new job. (until)
- 7 I'll buy the computer. I'll check the price. (before)
- 8 We'll get up. Dad will have gone to work. (by the time)

WRITE

1 Think about a future event you're looking forward to and that you think your friends would like to participate in. Use the writing plan to organize your ideas.

Paragraph 1	Begin with some friendly opening comments. Say why you are writing.
Paragraphs 2/3	Give more information about the event you mentioned in the first paragraph. Say who is going, when it is taking place, what people should bring, etc.
Paragraph 4	Ask about other bloggers' recent activities and future plans.

2 Write your blog entry using your notes from exercise 1 to help you.

The Lipstick

by Mary Roberts Rinehart

Biography

Mary Roberts Rinehart was born in 1876 in Pennsylvania, USA. After leaving school she became a nurse and married a doctor. In 1903 the couple lost all their money because of a financial crisis and as a result Mary started to write short stories to earn some money. Her crime stories were very popular and in 1907 she wrote The Circular Staircase, the novel that made her famous. Later she founded a publishing company with her sons, and today it publishes textbooks.

I was nearly home when I realized I was being followed. Feeling frightened, I stopped and turned. But it was only a girl. She spoke my name.

'Miss Baring? I saw you at the inquest and a newspaper man told me your name. You've been to the Hammonds', haven't you?'

'Yes. What about it?'

She was quite young and seemed nervous.

'Were you a friend of Mrs Hammond's?' she asked.

'She was my cousin. Why?'

She took a cigarette from her bag and lit it. 'Because I think she was pushed out of that window. I work in an office across the street, and I was looking out. I didn't know who she was, of course.'

'Do you mean you saw it happen?' I said, amazed.

'No. But I saw her at the window just before it happened, and she was using a lipstick. When I looked out again she was ... on the pavement.' Her hand started to shake and she threw away the cigarette. 'I don't think a woman would use a lipstick just before she was going to do a thing like that, do you?'

'No,' I said. 'You're sure it was Mrs Hammond?'

'Yes. She had on a green dress, and I noticed her hair. I went back tonight to see if the lipstick was on the pavement. I couldn't find it. The street was crowded. Someone may have picked it up. It's three days ago. But I'm sure she had it when she fell.'

That was what I had not told Fred, that Elinor's gold lipstick was missing from her bag.

I looked at my watch. It was only eleven o'clock.

'We could go and look again,' I said.

She would not tell me her name. 'Just call me Smith. I don't want to get involved. I have a job to keep.'

I found the lipstick. It was at the side of the road, and twenty cars must have run over it. But after I wiped the mud off it, the familiar letter 'E' was there to see.

Miss Smith saw it and gasped. 'So I was right.'

Then she jumped on a bus, and I never saw her again.

1 Read the text. What type of story do you think this is?

- 1 a crime story
- 2 a fantasy story
- 3 a historical story

2 1.30 Read the text again and answer the questions.

- 1 What is the name of narrator and what is her relationship with the dead girl?
- 2 What did the girl called Smith see?
- 3 Who was the first person to look for the lipstick?
- 4 Where did Mrs Hammond usually keep her lipstick?
- 5 What condition was the lipstick in when Miss Baring found it? Why?

3 Look at the text and use your own words and ideas to explain your answers.

- 1 Why do you think the girl called Smith doesn't believe a woman would use lipstick before jumping out of a window?
- 2 Who do you think Fred is and why do you think Miss Baring hadn't told him about the lipstick?
- 3 The narrator says it was 11 o'clock. Do you think it was 11 o'clock in the morning or at night? Why?

4 Imagine you are a police officer who has interviewed Miss Smith. Write a report describing the neighbourhood where the crime took place. Describe the victim and what happened to her. Also describe the witness, Miss Smith. What do you think of her and her account of the events?

BUILDING art

- A Originally, buildings were places that offered us protection from the weather and wild animals. As society developed, buildings were also used as symbols of power and for artistic expression. However, architects are now aware of the need to design buildings that are environmentally friendly. Architecture today is therefore both a science and an art.
- B New technology, modern building materials and sophisticated computer programs now allow architects to create designs that were impossible only a few years ago. In a country such as the UK, that means using a lot of glass to make the most of natural light. Modern house designs use enormous windows to form the roofs and walls. Of course, this also means the inhabitants can enjoy the views of the local area.
- C Many modern architects try to create buildings that connect with the land around it. While some ideas such as the Tree House by London-based architects are still just plans, others have already built environmentally friendly houses. A good example of a house that fits in with its environment was built in Cumbria in the north of England. Instead of building the house on the land, it was built under it! Both the environment and the owners benefit from the house's underground location. The earth around the house keeps it warm in the cold English winters and cool on the occasional hot days in summer.
- D These kinds of houses are still experimental. However, they show that architects and builders can construct houses that do not negatively affect the local area. They also allow owners to feel closer to nature and at the same time feel responsible for it. Hopefully, these new ideas will be included in more houses of the future.

THE SEVEN WONDERS OF THE WORLD?

If you read the online editions of newspapers and magazines you'll know that internet publications frequently compile top lists. 'The 10 funniest films this year' or 'The 20 best sports cars ever' are just a couple of examples that can be found. However, list-writing is not a modern phenomenon. The Ancient Greeks started the fashion with a list that has remained popular for centuries: the Seven Wonders of the World. The Hanging Gardens of Babylon, the statue of Zeus, Artemis's sanctuary, the Mausoleum of King Mausolos, the Colossus of Rhodes, the Lighthouse of Alexandria and the Great Pyramid of Giza were all proclaimed to be the best constructions in the world by Greek scholars. But what criteria did they use to decide what was a wonder and what wasn't?

In the first place, the Greeks didn't use the word 'wonders', but talked about 'things to be seen'. As the seven monuments were all situated around the Mediterranean Sea, the list was a kind of guide for Greek tourists, possibly the world's first tourists. Furthermore, it wasn't impartial, as five of the wonders were built by the Greeks themselves and the list is really a celebration of Greek building techniques. Although the Greeks wouldn't have known about them, other monuments such as the Great Wall of China or the Mayan Temples in Guatemala existed at the time and would have been contenders for a place on the list. Not surprisingly then, a lot

- 2 The original Seven Wonders of the World
 - a were all in Greece.
 - b included constructions in China and Guatemala.
 - c had all been built by Greeks.
 - d were chosen by Greek experts.
- 3 The Greeks wrote the original list
 - a to express admiration for their own culture.
 - b as part of the world's first tourist guide.
 - c as a guide for builders.
 - d as a response to lists in other countries.
- 4 The New7Wonders Foundation annoyed people because they
 - a only allowed people to vote once.
 - b organized a publicity stunt in Lisbon.
 - c didn't include the Great Pyramid of Giza in their list.
 - d sent text messages asking people to vote.
- 5 The list made by the New7Wonders Foundation
 - a was compiled by experts.
 - b showed the votes for the best ancient wonder.
 - c only showed the results of voting in Lisbon.
 - d recorded votes by people using modern technology.
- 6 UNESCO is an example of an organization that
 - a organizes internet campaigns to compile popularity lists.
 - b works to protect places of cultural interest.
 - c specializes in entertainment.
 - d builds interesting monuments.

of other lists have been made throughout history as mankind has continued to create spectacular constructions all over the world.

The most recent example took place in 2007 when an organization called the New7Wonders Foundation set up an internet poll to compile a new list. However, the organizers started badly by not including the only ancient wonder still in existence, the 4,500-year-old Great Pyramid of Giza. This omission immediately met with worldwide disapproval. It was considered a serious error to exclude a construction of such historical importance. The organizers quickly tried to correct their mistake by giving the pyramid special status. However, further controversy arose when it was discovered that multiple votes could be made by participants. Some countries quickly organized massive campaigns to get their monuments voted for. They sent thousands of text messages to their citizens encouraging them to take part in the poll as often as they wanted. When the results were finally announced at a spectacular ceremony in Lisbon, some observers felt that the event had been turned into a giant publicity stunt for tourism. But was it really so different from the idea behind the Ancient Greeks' list?

Thanks to the internet, campaigns to categorize monuments, historical artefacts and places of natural beauty will continue. And although such activities are often seen as just entertainment, they do raise our awareness of the need to protect and preserve monuments. However, if people really want to do something to protect our heritage, they need to contact organizations such as UNESCO (The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization). They take the job of looking after the world's famous monuments very seriously.

- 3 2.02 Read the text again. Decide if the sentences are true or false.

- 1 The lists written by the Ancient Greeks were quickly forgotten.
- 2 The Ancient Greeks used the list to recommend great places to visit.
- 3 The Mayan Temples weren't built in time to be included in the original Seven Wonders of the World.
- 4 The monuments and buildings on the new list were announced in Portugal.
- 5 The internet will encourage the making of more lists in the future.

GRAMMAR

The passive

EXPLORE

- 1 Read the text. What does UNESCO do?

UNESCO's World Heritage Sites

Since 1972 a large number of important cultural sites have been protected by UNESCO. The idea to protect them had been inspired by international cooperation during the Nubia Campaign in Egypt in the 1960s, when monuments such as the Temple of Ramses II were moved by local and international experts. These monuments were going to be affected by the building of the Aswan dam.

Today there are over 870 protected sites and the UNESCO list is added to every year. The biggest number of sites in one country can be found in Italy, where there are over 40. Some of the UNESCO sites are threatened by natural disasters, modern building projects and war. At present, sites in 24 different countries are being given special protection. UNESCO sends experts to help local organizations save these sites from being damaged or destroyed. In the future, sites of natural importance will also be added to the list.

- 2 Find 10 examples of the passive in the text. Which tenses are used?

LEARN THIS!

Reasons for using the passive

- The passive is used when we want to focus on the result of an action, rather than on the person or people responsible for the action.
... the World Heritage Convention was signed by the 190 member countries of UNESCO ...
- The passive is used when it is not important to say who does something or because it is obvious:
... and it (the list of protected sites) is added to every year ... It is obvious that UNESCO does this.
- The passive is frequently used in academic writing, reports, scientific texts, official announcements and to describe a process:
The artefacts are inspected on site and then they are taken to the museum to be restored.

EXPLORE

- 1 Read the text. How will the future museum in Alexandria be different from other museums?

For many years it was believed that the bay of Alexandria was home to ancient artefacts and monuments and in 1961, diver Kamel Abu Saadat proved it. He made drawings of the columns, statues and ships he had seen underwater and showed them to the Egyptian government and UNESCO. However, they decided to leave Saadat's discoveries at the bottom of the sea because it is said that sea water protects them. Instead, an underwater museum to let people see the artefacts has been designed. It is thought that the artefacts include parts of the Lighthouse of Alexandria and Cleopatra's palace. The plan is to get a series of glass tubes built so people can see the monuments close-up. The museum will have the monuments illuminated with strong underwater lights so that visitors can see every detail.

A description of a place

READ

- 1 Who built the park and why? Is the park used today in the way the architect originally planned?

A place I will always return to

- A Parc Güell is on a rocky hill overlooking the city of Barcelona. There are stunning views of the city and the Mediterranean Sea. It was designed and constructed by the architect Antoni Gaudí between 1900 and 1914 and it was originally planned as a luxurious housing estate, but only a few houses were built. Consequently, there are lots of open spaces in the park.
- B Gaudí tried to copy and incorporate the shapes of nature into his designs, so his buildings in the park fit in very well with the natural environment. He also used thousands of small pieces of ceramics to cover his constructions and as a result they are incredibly colourful.
- C A lot of Antoni Gaudí's contemporaries ridiculed his style of architecture but today his buildings are part of the UNESCO world heritage site. Because of this, thousands of tourists visit the park every year. However, despite the large number of visitors that the park receives, it is still a place of peace and calm. As a result, it continues to be popular with local people, too.
- D I have great childhood memories of the park when I would come here with my parents to play at the weekends. Nowadays, I like to come here in the evenings to escape from the noisy city and sit and read a book or simply watch the world go by. In fact, the park has become part of my life and I can't imagine the city without it.

Fraser Doherty

Fraser Doherty from Edinburgh, Scotland loved his grandmother's jam and at the age of 14 he decided to learn all of her recipes. However, Fraser was soon coming up with his own flavours and they were so tasty that he was making a thousand jars of jam a week to sell in his neighbourhood.

Fraser soon realized that jam-making could be a lucrative business and he wanted to move to a factory so he spoke to various jam manufacturers. Unfortunately, although they liked his recipes they told him he was too young. They also asked him how much capital he had for the project. His answer was, 'nothing'. Obviously, this didn't make his idea a very attractive proposition. However, Fraser persisted and he finally found a factory in the north of England that was willing to take a risk on his jams. It was a risk that has paid off.

Fraser's jams are now on the shelves of some of Britain's most important supermarket chains and they have made him into a rich young man. However, he donates a lot of money to charity, especially to organizations that work with some of his biggest clients, elderly people.

Yasmine El-Safy

Even though the teenage magazine market is enormous, what do you do if you think that the mainstream media doesn't deal with the topics that interest you? As far as one American-Egyptian girl was concerned, there was only one answer: write, edit and produce your own magazine.

Reading tip

In an article that's separated into sections, read the first paragraph of each section to get a quick idea about what the main topic is.

READ

- 1 Read the Reading tip. Find out what type of business each of the young people set up.
- 2 Read the text. Answer the questions with Fraser, Yasmine or Suhas.
 - 1 Who has offices all over the world?
 - 2 Who does lots of different jobs?
 - 3 Who became rich thanks to learning a skill from a relative?
 - 4 Who produced a product that they couldn't find?
 - 5 Who refused to accept negative answers?
 - 6 Who was bought something important by a parent?

3 2.08 Read the text again. Then choose the best answers.

- 1 Fraser Doherty enjoyed eating jam so much that he
 - a invented his own recipes.

 - c young employees who are very keen.
 - d employees from other parts of the world.

Yasmine El-Safy from California published the first edition of MG magazine in 2005, when she was almost 14. The magazine is aimed at girls between the ages of 12 and 18 and offers subscribers a wide range of articles from contributors from as far away as Britain and Kuwait.

Although Yasmine loves writing, she says that most of her time is now taken up with running the business side of the magazine. In a recent interview she said she was a writer, photographer, graphic designer, publisher and sales person! She also explained that her mother had had an important role in the magazine's success, always giving her good business advice. Yasmine has discovered that running your own business is extremely hard work, but at least she can now find a magazine that she thinks is worth reading.

Suhas Gopinath

As a young teenager Suhas Gopinath from Bangalore in India dreamed of being a vet, but when his father returned home with a computer and a modem, he started planning for a different future. By the age of 12 he had already built his own website and a few years later he launched his own computer consultancy. Suhas' firm helps clients with web design, online shopping and internet security.

The company is constantly growing and as a result Suhas is always looking to recruit new staff, but if you're over 25 don't apply for a job. Suhas, who was at one time the world's youngest CEO (chief executive officer), told a local newspaper that he wanted to work with young colleagues. He also added he wasn't too worried about an applicant's qualifications and claimed that enthusiasm was more important than exam results.

So far, Suhas' recipe of youth and eagerness seems to be working for him as his company now has 11 branches around the world and he was voted Young Global Leader by the World Economic Forum in 2008.

EXPLORE

- 1 Read the text. What qualities do successful people have?

The secrets of success

All successful people agree that there is no success without hard work. As sports coach Vince Lombardi said the only place success comes before work is in the dictionary. You must also be able to accept failure. Basketball player Michael Jordan said he had failed over and over again in his life and that was why he succeeded. Another important quality is patience. Author Maya Angelou said all great achievements needed time.

Finally, two pieces of advice on our attitude towards work: inventor Thomas Edison told an interviewer that he had never done a day's work in his life. It had all been fun! And writer Kahlil Gibran said if you couldn't work with love, you should leave your work. In other words, be positive!

Reported statements

- We use reported speech to talk about things said in the past. The tense of the reported sentence usually changes. Personal and possessive pronouns, time expressions and demonstrative pronouns also usually change: 'My business was very successful last year,' said Jeff. Jeff said his business had been very successful the year before.
- Sometimes we don't change the tense of the verb because it refers to something that is always true or a habit: 'Water boils at 100°' said Louise. Louise said water boils at 100°.
- The auxiliary verbs can, may, must and have to usually change form. The auxiliary verbs might, could, should and ought to don't usually change form.

- 3 Match the five examples of reported speech from exercise 2 with the three explanations in the Learn this! box.

Reported questions

When we report questions, we use the word order of a statement. When we report a question that gives a yes / no answer, we add the words if or whether to the reported question:

'Have you had a lot of success?'

He asked me if / whether I'd had a lot of success.

When we report a question made with a question word, we repeat the word:

'When will you write the article?'

She asked me when I would write the article.

- 2 Write the original questions.

- He asked me where I was from. Where are you from?
- They asked us if we were launching a new product.
- Anne asked when we were opening the new shop.
- Sara asked me whether I subscribed to the magazine.
- The editor asked me whether I had written the article.
- They asked who would run the business in Chicago.
- I asked if the company had recruited new staff.
- Tom asked Joe when he had taken over the café.

- 3 Work in pairs. Tell each other what advice you would give in each of the following situations and then report what your partner has told you to the class.

- I'm always late for class.
- My parents won't let me have a mobile phone.
- I find maths really difficult.

- 1 Read the text. Do you think the system suggested for solving problems is a good one?

I attended a talk for teen entrepreneurs recently and some of the advice I heard on problem-solving is useful for lots of situations. First of all, the presenter explained that we had to write down our problem. After that, he encouraged us to do some brain-storming and he suggested writing a list of all the solutions we could possibly think of. Once we had written our list, he recommended reading the list and choosing the top three solutions. Then we had to decide which was the most practical one to try. He assured us that this system of problem-solving often worked and he insisted on finding the solution with the help of pen and paper. He claimed that when we see the problem written down our brains start working on the solution immediately!

WRITING

A report

READ

- 1 Read the report on teenagers who work. What are the reasons given for working?

Teenagers at work

Introduction

The aim of this report is to analyse the type of paid work carried out by students between the ages of 16 and 18 at our school. The information included was obtained from personal interviews with fifty students.

Who works?

Twenty-six students said that they had worked to earn money during the last year. As far as the other twenty-four students were concerned, six regularly do volunteer work while the rest claimed they did not want to work until finishing their studies.

Why work?

Eleven of the students work to make a financial contribution to their families, while seven students help out with family businesses. These students felt that they were helping their parents and gaining experience for when they joined the businesses in the future. Nine students said they worked to gain experience in the professions they hoped to work in after studying. Finally, five of the students said they worked because they wanted to help others.

Conclusions

On the whole, I believe that most teenagers at our school feel that working in their free time is a positive experience. As regards the effect that employment has on their school work, most students felt that it does not interfere. In fact, in most cases, they felt it made them better students, as working had made them appreciate the need for a good education.

- 2 Read the report again and decide if the sentences about report writing are true or false.

- The writer's opinions do not appear until the final paragraph.
- It is better to use contracted forms of verbs.
- Use headings for each paragraph.
- It's not necessary to say where your information comes from.
- Explain the purpose of the report in the introduction.

Pride and Prejudice

by Jane Austen

Biography

Jane Austen was born in 1775 in England. Her family loved literature and from a very young age Austen wrote poems and stories for them. However, her first novel, Sense and Sensibility, wasn't published until she was 35. Her novels took a humorous look at marriage and family life but critics didn't realize what a great writer she was until the end of the 19th century.

One morning, about a week after Bingley had proposed to Jane, a carriage arrived outside Longbourn House. Elizabeth, Kitty and their mother were in the sitting-room, when suddenly the door was thrown open, and their visitor entered. It was Lady Catherine de Bourgh.

They were all extremely astonished. Mrs Bennet, flattered to have such an important visitor, received her with great politeness. After sitting for a moment in silence, Lady Catherine said very stiffly to Elizabeth, 'I hope you are well, Miss Bennet. That lady, I suppose, is your mother. And that, I suppose, is one of your sisters.'

Elizabeth replied that she was correct in thinking so. Lady Catherine rose and said, 'I would like to have a walk in your garden, Miss Bennet, if you could accompany me.'

'Go, my dear,' cried Mrs Bennet. 'Show her ladyship the different walks. I'm sure she will like them.'

As they passed through the hall, Lady Catherine opened the doors into the different rooms, looked in, and declared them to be reasonable-looking rooms. They went into the garden in silence. Elizabeth was determined to make no effort at conversation with a woman who was being more than usually rude and disagreeable.

Lady Catherine began speaking when she was sure they were alone. 'You must know, Miss Bennet, why I have come.'

Elizabeth looked surprised. 'Indeed, you are mistaken, madam. I have no idea why you are honouring us with a visit.'

'Miss Bennet,' replied her ladyship angrily, 'however insincere you may be, you shall not find me so. A most alarming report reached me two days ago. I was told that you, Miss Elizabeth Bennet, would soon be engaged to my nephew, my own nephew, Mr Darcy. Although I knew it must be a shameful lie, and I would not offend him by supposing it to be possible, I decided at once to come here, to let you know my feelings.'

'If you believed it to be impossible,' said Elizabeth, with disdain, 'I wonder why your ladyship took the trouble of coming so far.'

'I came to insist on having this report contradicted. Tell me, is it true?'

'Your ladyship may ask questions which I shall not choose to answer.'

1 Read the text. Where do you think the story is set? Why?

2 (2.14) Read the text again and answer the questions.

- How did Mrs Bennet feel about Lady Catherine's visit?
- Why did Lady Catherine suggest a walk in the garden?
- Why didn't Elizabeth want to talk to Lady Catherine?
- Does Lady Catherine believe that Elizabeth doesn't know why she has come?
- What is the reason for Lady Catherine's visit?

3 Look at the text, and use your own words and ideas to explain your answers.

- What kind of person do you think Lady Catherine is? Why?
- In your opinion, why does Lady Catherine look into the rooms in Longbourn House?
- Why do you think Lady Catherine does not want Elizabeth to marry her nephew?

4 How do you think the conversation between Lady Catherine and Elizabeth continues? Write a dialogue between the two women talking about Elizabeth's possible wedding to Mr Darcy and Lady Catherine's reasons for being against the wedding.

SKILLS ROUND-UP 5-6

Festivals

READ

- 1 Read the text quickly. When does each festival take place?

Every country has its festivals. Below we look at three very different but popular festivals in Britain.

THE OXFORD LITERARY FESTIVAL, OXFORD

Are you a bookworm? If you are, then you should try to visit Oxford in the spring. Over 400 authors from all around the world come for a week to talk about books. But they don't just talk. Authors of cook books for young people give demonstrations of their skills in the kitchen and ask members of the audience to participate as well. Writers of science books give practical demonstrations of their theories in laboratories, and the editors of the Sherlock Holmes stories even offer advice on how to be a young detective. In fact, there are so many activities that the people who attend often don't have time to read a page all week!

THE INTERNATIONAL FESTIVAL, EDINBURGH

Although everybody talks about the Edinburgh Festival there are in fact various festivals in the Scottish capital towards the end of the summer. The streets of the city are filled with some of the world's most famous classical music performers and opera singers. The original International Festival began in order to improve relations between the countries that had been fighting in the Second World War. The Fringe festival, which takes place at the same time as the International Festival, is now the world's biggest theatre festival and thousands of people come to see the performances that take place on the city's streets.

THE LUDLOW FOOD FESTIVAL, LUDLOW

In recent years, a lot of English towns have started food festivals to promote local products and show people that it is easy to find good, healthy food close to home. The Ludlow Marches Food Festival in the English Midlands is considered one of the best. The festival takes place at the beginning of September and allows visitors to try dishes made with local ingredients by some of the country's top chefs. You can also taste dishes from abroad. Last year, North African food was available at various stands. Visitors leave with their stomachs full, and lots of new cooking ideas.

- 2 Read the text again. Use the names of the three festivals to answer the questions.

At which festival:

- 1 can you find two festivals going on at the same time?
- 2 can you find a lot of writers?
- 3 do you get ideas that you can try at home?
- 4 can you meet scientists?

Are you intelligent?

BEFORE READING

This is an IQ question. Which figure (A, B, C or D) completes the diagram? What do you think IQ means?

READ

1 Read the text quickly. Match the headings with the paragraphs (A–E). You don't need to use one of the headings.

- 1 Parents have an important role.
- 2 IQ tests develop people's intelligence.
- 3 Support for Galton's views?
- 4 A pioneer in the field.
- 5 A mistaken belief.
- 6 Environment does affect intelligence.

NATURE OR NURTURE?

Who enjoys doing exams? Very few school students seem to, but they would all agree that a student who does well in exams and tests is a student who is intelligent. But where does intelligence come from?

A The 19th century scientist Francis Galton was one of the first to study human intelligence seriously. Galton wanted to discover if it was hereditary or if it was a product of people's environments. In other words, were people born intelligent or could intelligence be improved through education? Following years of research, Galton concluded that most of our brain power comes from our genes and that our surroundings don't have much effect on how clever we are.

B Galton's theory that intelligence was hereditary dominated psychology throughout the 20th century. In fact, studies in the 1960s of identical twins succeeded in reinforcing Galton's views. The twins in the study had been separated at birth and adopted by different families, so they had never lived together. In some cases, they didn't even know about each other. Researchers interviewed the twins when they had reached adulthood and discovered that they had all achieved remarkably similar positive results in their studies. This seemed to be clear proof that intelligence was passed on from generation to generation. However, one professor of psychology, Richard E Nisbett, was not convinced.

C For years Nisbett had adhered to the belief that most of our cerebral skills, or lack of them, were inherited. However, he

2  2.16 Read the text again. Then choose the best answers.

- 1 In the 19th century Francis Galton started studying intelligence and
 - a believed the environment affected people's levels of intelligence.
 - b thought education could help improve intelligence.
 - c thought we couldn't do much to become more intelligent.
 - d said that passing exams was a sign of intelligence.
- 2 Galton's ideas about hereditary intelligence
 - a have had little effect on psychology.
 - b refer only to twins.
 - c were not his own.
 - d were accepted by most psychologists.
- 3 The sets of twins in the study
 - a could be used to support Galton's theories.
 - b were interviewed when they were children.
 - c lived with the same family.
 - d did badly at school.
- 4 The professor of psychology, Richard E Nisbett
 - a had always doubted that intelligence was mostly hereditary.
 - b wanted information that hadn't been provided.
 - c thought all middle-class parents were identical.
 - d carried out the study on twins and their families.

soon realized that there was a flaw in the study on the twins. There was no information about the families who had adopted them. Through his own research he discovered that the adoptive families all had middle-class backgrounds. In other words, they were families who were able to provide children with a good education. Nisbett discovered that all the sets of twins had been brought up in almost identical environments and had each received a good education. Couldn't this be the reason for the similarity in results between them? Nisbett believed that this was the case.

- D Further studies by a university professor in New Zealand, James Flynn, confirmed the idea that the environment greatly affects how clever we are. Flynn had studied lots of IQ (Intelligence Quotient) tests that were carried out around the world during the 20th century. These tests are used to measure a person's intelligence and someone managing a score of 100 is said to have an average level. Flynn noticed that people who had regular access to education and a good diet had been able to increase their average IQ by thirty points.
- E Nisbett and Flynn have shown that although our ancestors' genes have a lot to do with intellect, it also depends on the opportunities we get to develop our brains. But of course parents have a big influence on that too. Parents can help their children to realize their potential by speaking to them frequently, by reading to them and by encouraging them to be aware of the world around them. It's no use being born with innate intelligence if nobody encourages you to make the best of it.

- 5 James Flynn discovered that
 - a New Zealanders do a lot of IQ tests.
 - b a good environment helps people improve their average IQ scores.
 - c his IQ was getting better and better.
 - d people with an IQ of 100 were very intelligent.
- 6 Parents can help children by
 - a interacting with them regularly.
 - b taking them to a psychologist.
 - c telling them about their ancestors.
 - d frequently giving them IQ tests.

Question tags

In question tags we repeat the pronoun, tense and auxiliary verb from the statement. Negative question tags follow affirmative statements, and affirmative tags follow negative statements:

We're late, aren't we? He didn't fail the test, did he?

In some cases we need to use different structures:

- 1 When somebody / someone or everybody / everyone is the subject of the main clause, we use the pronoun they in the question tag:
Everybody arrived on time, didn't they?
- 2 When nothing, something or everything is the subject of the main clause, we use the pronoun it:
Nothing will happen, will it?
- 3 The question tag for sentences that begin with Let's is shall:
Let's study together, shall we?

WRITING

A discussion essay

READ

- 1 Read the discussion essay. Do you agree with the writer's conclusions?

Exams do not test people's intelligence and are unfair.

- A It is often supposed that exams and tests are an accepted tool for measuring people's academic achievement in most schools. It is generally believed that a successful exam candidate demonstrates not only their knowledge of a particular subject, but also their intelligence. Nevertheless, some people argue that exams only test students' memories and not their mental abilities.
- B Those in favour of exams say they allow teachers to see if their students are working at the right level. In fact, exams are probably the quickest and most efficient way of assessing how well a large group of students are following a course. As well as that, exams allow young people to gain qualifications that will enable them to go on to university and look for careers.
- C On the other hand, it is widely accepted that exams cause students a lot of stress. Critics of exams claim that such anxiety can mean some students do not perform as well as they should on the day of an exam. Besides which, it is often stated that some schools are so focused on exams that they spend their time teaching students how to pass exams and not how to develop their intellect.
- D In conclusion, I would say exams are useful and enable schools and students to measure knowledge and progress. Nonetheless, one bad exam result can sometimes mean not being able to study a particular degree or get a particular job. I think that importance should also be given to a student's performance throughout the academic year. In that way, some of the pressure would be taken off students who find exams a stressful experience.

- 2 Read the discussion essay again and answer the questions.

- 1 Which paragraph gives the writer's opinions?
- 2 Which paragraph supports the title of the essay?
- 3 Which paragraph states what the issue is?
- 4 Which paragraph provides arguments against the title of the essay?

PREPARE

Writing tip: presenting opinions

In a discussion essay you usually present a number of opinions that are in favour of or against the topic of the essay. These opinions can be presented using a passive structure to suggest that it is an idea held by a lot of people. An adverb (generally, often, widely, usually, etc.) is sometimes added between the verb to be and the past participle to emphasize this:
It is often said that children learn foreign languages quicker than adults.

When we use an active structure and say who holds a particular opinion, we use expressions that are very general:
few / some / most people those in favour of / those against opponents of / supporters of

Diving in with both feet

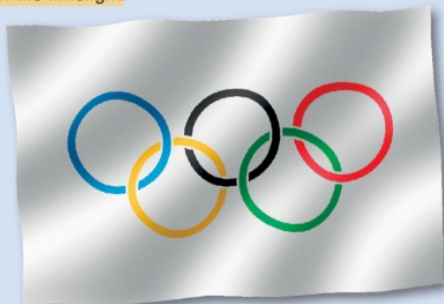

A Who hasn't daydreamed of holding up a trophy or receiving a medal in front of thousands of cheering fans? The idea of becoming a sports star appeals to millions of people but everyone knows that only a few have the talent to achieve it. So when someone does manage to do it, they win the admiration of all sports fans. However, as Olympic diver Thomas Daley discovered, there are two sides to sporting success.

B Thomas Daley started diving at the age of seven and from the beginning it was clear that he was going to be a diving prodigy. He also had the quality that turns talented people into winners – determination. When he was eight he drew a picture of himself diving into a swimming pool with the words 'Olympic Champion' written underneath and he then set about working hard to make his dream come true. By the time he was 10 he had become the youngest ever under-18 diving champion of Britain and he won every competition that he entered. As a result of this amazing winning streak, his coach actually sent him to compete against older boys in Europe so he could experience losing. However, the plan backfired and Thomas stood on the winners' podium at the end of all the competitions he competed in. Such an excellent record was soon noticed by the British Olympic team and in 2008 he was selected to represent Great Britain at the Beijing Olympics.

C Thomas will always remember the year 2008. At the age of 13, he became one of the youngest Britons ever to reach the final stages of the Olympic Games. He finished seventh in the 10 metre diving final, an exceptional performance for someone participating in their first games. Consequently, Thomas became an overnight media star in Britain. Fortunately, his down-to-earth parents protected him from all the media attention, and soon after the Olympic Games they encouraged him to return to his normal routine of training and going to school. However, it was at school that he discovered that there was a price to pay for being in the limelight.

D His first day back at college in Plymouth was covered by the media and TV reports showed his classmates saying how proud they felt of him. Thomas himself even explained that he was glad to be back in a normal environment. However, once the TV cameras left the playground, jealousy, provoked by Thomas's success, appeared in some pupils and the Olympic star suddenly became a victim of bullying. At first the bullying started with people calling him names but Thomas thought that it would soon go away. However, the situation worsened and some pupils started throwing things at him and emptying out his pencil case in front of the rest of the class. When the bullying escalated to threats of physical violence his parents decided that they had to move Thomas to another school.

E Although Thomas realized his success had caused his problems at school, he never once wished he hadn't been to the Olympics. In fact, he decided to help combat bullying by becoming a celebrity supporter of the charity Childline. Childline provides help and advice to children who are suffering from bullying and Thomas's experience as a victim and his fame helped bring the problem to the attention of the media. Furthermore, Thomas demonstrated that his sporting talent hadn't been affected by what had happened at his old school when he became the world's number one at the World Diving Championships in Rome in 2009. Thomas's victory and his work for Childline made it clear that the bullies had definitely lost.

Mixed conditionals

EXPLORE

- 1 Read the text. What jobs do the members of Ronaldinho's family do for him?

FAMILY INVOLVEMENT in a sports star's career is often very important. Footballer Ronaldinho has always worked closely with his family, although bad luck has often kept them together. If injury had not cut short his brother Roberto's football career, he wouldn't be Ronaldinho's manager today. Ronaldinho has benefited from his brother's knowledge of the game. And if Ronaldinho's father hadn't died some years ago, his mother wouldn't always be around to cook his favourite dishes for him.

His sister Deisi finished her studies when her brother was becoming popular and he needed someone to organize his meetings with the media. She was the perfect candidate for the job! In fact, if Ronaldinho didn't have the support of all his family, he would have had to employ quite a few people during his long career!

Mixed conditionals

We sometimes combine unreal conditional sentences so that the time in the if clause is different from the time in the result clause.

We can use mixed conditionals to say how an unreal past affects an unreal present:

PAST	PRESENT
If he had gone to training,	But he didn't go to training
he would be in the first team.	so he isn't in the first team.
If we had bought tickets	But we didn't buy tickets
on the internet, we'd be	on the internet so we're
at the match now.	not at the match now.

We can also use mixed conditionals to say how an unreal present affects an unreal past:

PRESENT	PAST
If he was physically	But he isn't physically
stronger, he would have	stronger so he didn't
had a longer career.	have a longer career.
If I didn't have to study so	But I do have to study
much, I would have played	so I didn't play in the
in last night's match.	match.

I wish / If only

EXPLORE

1 Read the text and decide who said the sentences below.

1 If only I could count!

2 I wish it hadn't rained!

3 If only I had won just once!

The European Cup Final between Manchester United and Chelsea in 2008 finished in a penalty shootout. It was John Terry, the Chelsea captain's turn to take a penalty. The grass was very wet and just as he was about to kick the ball, Terry slipped, missing the goal and allowing Manchester United to go on and win the game.

Merlene Ottey was one of the best athletes the world had ever seen. During a long career she qualified for nearly every final in every important competition. However, she had one problem; she could never win an Olympic gold. When she ran her last Olympic race in Sydney in 2000, everyone wanted her to win but, as usual, she came second.

Spanish motorcyclist Julián Simón was racing in Barcelona in June 2009. His family watched as he approached the finish line in first position, his arms raised in victory. There was only one problem – the race hadn't finished yet and there was still one lap left! Julián realized his mistake, but it was too late and he finished fourth.

2 Read the Learn this! box. Which of the I wish / If only sentences in exercise 1 refer to the present and which refer to the past?

LEARN THIS!

I wish and If only

To describe a present situation that we want to be different, we use I wish and If only with a past tense:

I wish I played in a better team.

If only I could speak better English.

To describe a past situation that we want to have been different, we use I wish and If only with the past perfect tense:

I wish we hadn't lost the match.

If only I had listened to my coach's advice.

After I wish and If only we can use were instead of was.

I wish Mary were here to help me.

3 I can't run any faster!

7 Why didn't I study the videos of my rivals!

4 Why does my coach always shout at me?

8 I didn't go to bed early last night.

1 I wish it had stopped raining.

LOOK OUT!

We can use should have + past participle to say what would have been the right thing to do in a past situation. I've hurt my leg. I should have warmed up before playing. He told his sister she was stupid. He shouldn't have said that to her.

2 Say what should or shouldn't have been done in each of the following situations, using the verbs in brackets.

1 Sally told me her email address but I've forgotten it. (write down)

I should have written Sally's email address down.

2 Anne left home in a hurry this morning and she forgot to take her racket for the match. (get up)

3 Tom hasn't got any money because he bought the new Liverpool shirt. (spend)

4 James wasn't concentrating and he missed a great chance to put us in the lead. (score)

5 My local volleyball team hasn't won a game and they've lost their sponsor. (play better)

6 Yasmine fell out with the trainer and now she's not playing in the next game. (argue)

3 Tell your partner about:

1 three things you wish you could do well.

2 three things you wish you hadn't done or said during the past year.

3 three things you wish your brother / sister / class mates / team mates / friends wouldn't do.

WRITING

A biography

READ

- 1 Read the biography. What has Muhammad Ali achieved inside and outside the boxing ring?

- A Muhammad Ali was born in 1942 in Louisville, in the south of the USA. During his childhood and youth, Ali had to face the racism that was widespread in the southern states at that time. It was an experience that helped turn him into an exceptional fighter inside and outside the ring.
- B Ali's parents were too poor to pay for the school bus, so he used to run to school every day. It was good training and Ali excelled at all sports. When he was 12, Ali decided that his speed, reflexes and strength would make him into a good boxer and from then on he dedicated himself to the sport. From 1960 until his retirement in 1981, Ali won an Olympic gold medal, three world championships and 56 of the 61 professional fights he took part in.
- C However, Ali did not reserve his courage just for the boxing ring. He was intelligent and a skilful public speaker, a talent he used for criticizing the inequalities between African Americans and white Americans. And even though some white people wanted him to be banned from boxing, he continued to give vocal support to the civil rights movement.
- D Since his retirement, Muhammad Ali has worked for many humanitarian causes, and in 2005 he opened the Muhammad Ali Centre in Louisville, a centre dedicated to promoting respect, hope and understanding. He was also voted the sports personality of the 20th century by the American people, a decision that was not only a tribute to his incredible sporting talents but also a demonstration of how race relations had improved in the country.

- 2 Read the Writing tip. Which paragraph talks about:

- Muhammad Ali's life after retirement?
- his childhood?
- his activities outside the boxing ring?
- his sporting career?

Writing tip: organizing a biography

Biographies are often written in chronological order. We usually begin writing about the person's childhood then progress through the different stages of their life up to the time they die or the present day. Each paragraph deals with a particular time in the person's life.

PREPARE

Read the sentences about the life of the Brazilian footballer Pelé and decide which paragraph (A–D) you would write them in.

A childhood B early career C later career D retirement

- Pelé's last club was in the USA, where crowds increased by 80% while he was playing there. C
- He has received various awards for his work for the poor in Brazil and in 1999 the American magazine Time named him as one of the most important people of the 20th century. ___
- He played in the streets with his friends, using a sock filled with newspapers as a football. ___
- When he was 15 the coach of his boys' team sent him to play for Santo FC and told the club Pelé would be the greatest footballer in the world. ___
- Pelé grew up in a poor neighbourhood in São Paulo, Brazil, and earned money by serving in tea shops. ___
- In recent years he has been involved in the cinema, music and politics and he was even minister of sport for three years. ___
- At 16 Pelé was the leading scorer in the Brazilian league and he was the youngest player ever to play for the national team. ___
- In a game at the Maracana stadium he scored his 1000th goal from the penalty spot and he is the all-time leading goal scorer for the Brazilian national team. ___

WRITE

- Choose a person you would like to write a biography about. Find out about their childhood, family, education, career, successes, failures and later life.
- Organize your material into paragraphs.

- | | |
|-------------|---|
| Paragraph 1 | The person's birth, family (parents, brothers / sisters) and early years (family life, school). |
| Paragraph 2 | First steps in the person's career, successes / failures, the development of the person's career. |
| Paragraph 3 | The person's life away from the career that made them famous, family, other interests. |
| Paragraph 4 | The end of their career, life in retirement, public recognition. |

The Importance of Being Earnest

by Oscar Wilde

Biography

Oscar Wilde was born in 1854 in Ireland. He was an outstanding student, who studied at Trinity College in Dublin and at Oxford University. After leaving university, Wilde immediately became a full-time writer, dedicating himself to poetry and theatre plays. His plays were well known for their amusing dialogues and their criticism of society. He was very successful during his lifetime and his work continues to be performed in theatres throughout the English-speaking world.

LADY BRACKNELL (sitting down) You can take a seat, Mr Worthing.

(Looks in her pocket for note-book and pencil)

JACK Thank you, Lady Bracknell, I prefer standing.

LADY BRACKNELL (pencil and note-book in hand) I feel bound to tell you that you are not down on my list of eligible young men, although I have the same list as the dear Duchess of Bolton has. We work together, in fact. However, I am quite ready to enter your name, should your answers be what a really affectionate mother requires. How old are you?

JACK Twenty-nine.

LADY BRACKNELL A very good age to be married at. I have always been of the opinion that a man who desires to get married should know either everything or nothing. Which do you know?

JACK (after some hesitation) I know nothing, Lady Bracknell.

LADY BRACKNELL I am pleased to hear it. I do not approve of anything that tampers with natural ignorance. Ignorance is like a delicate exotic fruit; touch it and the bloom is gone. The whole theory of modern education is radically unsound. Fortunately in England, at any rate, education produces no effect whatsoever. If it did, it would prove a serious danger to the upper classes, and probably lead to acts of violence in Grosvenor Square. What is your income?

JACK Between seven and eight thousand a year.

LADY BRACKNELL (makes a note in her book) In land, or in investments?

JACK In investments, chiefly.

LADY BRACKNELL That is satisfactory. What between the duties expected of one during one's lifetime, and the duties exacted from one after one's death, land has ceased to be either a profit or a pleasure. It gives one position, and prevents one from keeping it up. That's all that can be said about land.

JACK I have a country house with some land, of course, attached to it, about fifteen hundred acres, I believe; but I don't depend on that for my real income. In fact, as far as I can make out, the poachers are the only people who make anything out of it.

LADY BRACKNELL A country house! How many bedrooms? Well, that point can be cleared up afterwards. You have a town house, I hope? A girl with a simple unspoiled nature, like Gwendolen, could hardly be expected to reside in the country.

1 Read the text. What is the purpose of the conversation between Lady Bracknell and Jack?

2 3.08 Read the text again and answer the questions.

- What do the Duchess of Bolton and Lady Bracknell have on their lists?
- Why does Lady Bracknell think it is good that Jack says he knows nothing?
- How does Jack make a living?
- What, according to Lady Bracknell, are the two problems with land?
- Why does Lady Bracknell believe that Jack should have a town house?

3 Look at the text, and use your own words and ideas to explain your answers.

- What kind of life do you think Jack has? Why?
- What does Lady Bracknell mean by 'a girl with a simple unspoiled nature'?
- Do you think Lady Bracknell will agree to Jack marrying her daughter? Why/Why not?

4 Imagine you are Jack. Write a letter to a friend telling him or her about the conversation you had with Lady Bracknell. Describe how you felt and what you thought of Lady Bracknell.

Luxury holidays

READ

- 1 Read the text quickly. What facilities are available at the resort in the Maldives?

GETTING AWAY FROM IT ALL

Although it might surprise you, the wealthy also need holidays. But of course, destinations for the richest members of society have to be luxurious and exclusive; the wealthy like to put distance between themselves and others, especially if they come from the same part of the world. So, when the holiday season arrives, wealthy British and American holidaymakers leave their fellow citizens behind and head off for exotic destinations.

Exclusive safaris are very fashionable amongst the wealthy and some have actually bought their own safari parks. However, if you don't want to worry about looking after wild animals and an enormous safari park, try the Phinda Reserve in South Africa. $6,500 a day will give you the chance to see all kinds of wonderful animals, including cheetahs and the rare black rhino. Furthermore, you'll have your own 4x4 vehicle and a team of guides as well as a luxurious apartment and staff to look after your every need.

Many wealthy people prefer more private surroundings than the Phinda Reserve. They fly off to exclusive resorts in places like the Maldivian islands in the Indian Ocean. There are 1,912 tiny islands in the Maldives, and many of them are only used by rich visitors. The most exclusive resort is The Rania Experience, where a first-class chef and 25 staff look after groups of 2 to 9 guests. The guests stay in a house that occupies most of the island and are surrounded by beautiful beaches. To get around, a 30-metre yacht with its own crew is available for the guests to use. The price? $13,000 per person, per night.

Today, places like The Rania Experience and similar resorts in Barbados and Mustique in the Caribbean have become the hiding places of the world's billionaires. In fact, most of the world's super rich don't want us to know about them, wherever they are. They belong to a exclusive club and they are very keen to keep it that way, especially when they are on holiday.

Reading through the ages

Reading is a skill that we have been practising for at least 5,000 years, and in today's world of digital information it is one that we need more than ever. Technological advances in communication mean we are dealing with more written material than ever before. But what we read has changed dramatically over the centuries.

One of the earliest known works of literature is The Epic of Gilgamesh, engraved on stone by the Sumerians from southern Iraq nearly 5,000 years ago. The work is an epic poem which deals with the themes of heroism, friendship and the quest for eternal life. Public poetry recitals were popular events at the time and it's not surprising that the first written texts such as The Epic of Gilgamesh were versions of the poems that could be heard in squares and theatres. In fact, The Iliad and The Odyssey by the Greek poet Homer are full of repeated phrases that had enabled the poets to memorize such long poems. However, as the poets quickly discovered, because the written word recorded everything, such devices became unnecessary, so they soon started experimenting with written language.

Many of the forms of literature that we recognize today were developed by the Greeks. Plato's writing made philosophy available to the reading public and Aristotle wrote Poetics, a work of literary criticism that is still studied by screenwriters in Hollywood today. In fact, the Greeks produced so many styles and forms of literature that the Romans limited themselves to copying them and spreading the Greeks' ideas across the Roman Empire.

With the fall of Rome, Europe degenerated into the Dark Ages, a period of cultural stagnation, while the Islamic Empire flourished. Under the caliph Harun al-Rashid, the Bayt al-Hikma (the House of Wisdom) was set up. The House of Wisdom was a kind of university and library that helped turn the empire's new capital, Baghdad, into the most important cultural centre in the world. Arab scholars built on the knowledge they had accumulated to start their own investigations and make their own discoveries. They also collected, preserved and translated all the Greek texts they could, and despite the destruction caused by wars and natural disasters, we still have many of these texts thanks to the House of Wisdom and other Arab centres of learning.

As the Islamic Golden Age faded, culture in Europe underwent a revival. It was the time of the Renaissance.

There was a renewed interest in the works of the Greeks and the development of new forms of writing such as the essay. However, literature was still mainly in the hands of the aristocracy and upper-classes, the only social groups

Reading tip

When looking for information in a text, think of the key words you need to find. Then scan the text.

1 Read the Reading tip. Read the text and answer the questions.

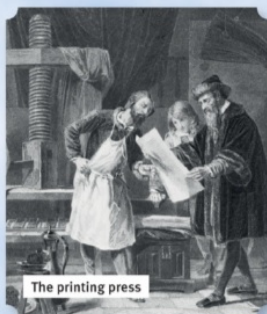

- Who developed a machine that made reading texts available to a lot more people?
- Who was the leader who helped establish the House of Wisdom?
- Who wrote a piece of literature engraved in stone?
- Who wrote a book that is still used in the cinema industry today?
- Who copied the works of the Greeks?

2 3.10 Read the text again. Then choose the best answers.

- As a consequence of improvements in technology
 - we can read 5,000-year-old documents.
 - we are reading more and more.
 - written communication has decreased.
 - reading skills have changed dramatically.
- The first written poems
 - reflected characteristics of spoken language.
 - were all written by the Sumerians.
 - were all written on stone.
 - had to be memorized by the writers.

that were literate and had the time to read and write. Poetry became a popular pastime for the wealthy. But all this was to dramatically change thanks to an invention of great importance: the printing press.

In 1455 the printing press was presented to the world by Johann Gutenberg. It had an immediate impact. The cost of publishing books dropped dramatically and book prices therefore fell. Literature was no longer only available to a privileged few, and the fact that more people had access to books also influenced what writers wrote about. Collections of popular legends and folk tales were published and texts written in prose started to appear in print. It was the beginning of a revolution that was to make reading an essential skill for everybody.

The printing press

- During the time of the Roman Empire, the Romans
 - invented new forms of literature.
 - limited the number of literature styles and forms people could use.
 - spread Greek ideas on literature.
 - developed literature into the forms we know today.
- Arab centres of learning
 - conserved many examples of Greek literature.
 - employed Roman writers.
 - were built during the Roman empire.
 - were opened all over the world.
- During the Renaissance in Europe
 - most people could read and write.
 - the upper-classes wrote in Greek.
 - most literature was written about rich people.
 - literature was enjoyed by only a few people.
- The fall in book prices was caused by
 - technological advances.
 - the publication of books of legends and folk tales.
 - a revolution.
 - new writing styles.

UNDERSTANDING IDEAS

Answer the questions. Look at the text, and use your own words and ideas.

- What do you think are the most important differences between written and spoken language?
- How important is it to read different types of literature?
- The printing press had a dramatic effect on literature. What effects do you think the computer has had on it?

GRAMMAR

Object relative clauses

EXPLORE

- 1 Read the text. Which three things helped make literature more popular in the 19th century?

Making literature available to everybody

In the 19th century, in a world without TV, people who had free time used it to read. Books and magazines were quite cheap and the language that writers used started to reflect everyday speech. Marketing also became important in publishing. Magazines which printed stories looked for well known writers. The magazines also published stories in weekly parts. Long queues of readers who were waiting for the next instalment of a popular story would form outside newsagents. The stories which these magazines serialized were the 19th century equivalent of TV soap operas. Literary experts of the time said the magazine stories were responsible for a decline in morals and people's poor use of language – exactly the same comments that critics of TV make today!

- 2 Read the Learn this! box. Read the text again and find six relative clauses.

LEARN THIS!

We use defining relative clauses to say which person or thing we are talking about and to distinguish the person or thing from others. We use the relative pronouns who, which and that as both subjects and objects of defining relative clauses:

The book which was published last year was the third in the series. (subject)

The writer who signed my book will be at the bookshop again today. (subject)

The book that you told me about is available on the internet. (object) (you is the subject)

The travel guides which I left on the table are all in English. (object) (I is the subject)

Omitting object relative pronouns

We can leave out the relative pronoun if it is the object of the verb in a defining relative clause. There is no change in meaning:

The book that you told me about wasn't in the shop.

The book you told me about wasn't in the shop.

EXPLOIT

- 1 Look at the sentences that you found in Explore exercise 2. Do they contain subject relative clauses or object relative clauses?
- 2 Choose the correct answer for each sentence. Sometimes more than one answer is possible.
 - 1 The magazine which / it / which it serialized Georgy Zelden's historical novels was al-Hilal.

 - 3 The bookshop which / that / that I always go to is closing down.
 - 4 The character who he / who / which goes abroad to look for work is based on the author.
 - 5 The teacher we / who / that we liked the most, taught literature.

LOOK OUT!

Prepositions in relative clauses

We can use prepositions before the relative pronouns whom and which. This is quite formal.

He's the man from whom I bought the book.

23rd April is the day on which the book will be published.

We can also put prepositions at the end of the relative clause. This is quite informal.

He's the man who I bought the book from.

23rd April is the day that the book will be published on.

We can replace some relative pronouns with a preposition and which.

- where → in which / at which

- when → on which / in which

- why → for which

23rd April is the day when / on which the book will be published.

The town where / in which I was born is very small.

The reason why / for which I wrote the book was to give my side of the story.

- 3 Replace the relative pronouns with prepositions and the relative pronoun which.

1 The year when Shakespeare arrived in London, Elizabeth I was Queen of England.

The year in which Shakespeare arrived in London, Elizabeth I was Queen of England.

2 The industrial revolution was the reason why a lot of writers wrote about science in the 19th century.

3 I borrowed that book the day when I met your mother. She was the librarian!

4 The university where I studied has produced many famous authors.

5 One of the reasons why he wrote poetry was to experiment with the structure of the language.

Reduced relative clauses

EXPLORE

- 1 Read the text. What were Naguib Mahfouz's interests and what did he study at university?

Naguib Mahfouz was born in 1911 and grew up in a number of Cairo neighbourhoods which were often used by the author to provide the environment for his novels. Young Mahfouz was a bookworm. Classics and novels by modernist authors were just some of the books which were on his bookshelves. He was also interested in Egyptian history, an interest which was encouraged by frequent museum visits. At 18 he went to Cairo University and soon after getting a degree in philosophy, he took up writing. Mahfouz's first three novels, which were intended to form part of a series of historical novels, were set in the neighbourhoods of his youth. He then decided to write about contemporary Egypt and the lives of ordinary people who were living in a changing society. This period produced one of his best known works, The Cairo Trilogy. Naguib Mahfouz died in 2006 after publishing 34 novels. Eight years before his death he won the Nobel Prize for Literature and today his novels are read all over the world.

- 2 Find five relative clauses in the text.

LEARN THIS!

Reduced relative clauses

We can sometimes remove the relative pronouns who, which or that and the verb to be in subject relative clauses. These clauses are called reduced relative clauses.

Only the writers (which are) on the list have to be studied.

Online encyclopaedias are perfect for someone (that is) trying to save space.

He bought an antique book (which had been) written in the 12th century.

*Robert Louis Stevenson, (who was) the author of Treasure Island, was a good sailor.*

We can't reduce object relative clauses in this way:

Only the writers which I spoke about must be studied.

- 3 Read the Learn this! box. Rewrite the five relative clauses in the text on Naguib Mahfouz as reduced relative clauses.

... a number of Cairo neighbourhoods which were often used by the author to provide the environment for his novels.

WRITING

A book review

READ

- 1 Read the review and say what the message of the novel is.

One of my favourite books is The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn, a novel written by Mark Twain. Published in 1884, it's set around 1840 in various locations along the Mississippi river. The novel is written in the first person. Although it's a kind of adventure story, it follows the moral development of a young man surviving difficult circumstances.

The main character is the narrator, Huckleberry Finn. He's a wild teenager from an impoverished family that has abandoned him. He is adopted by a widow, who does her best to turn Huckleberry into a respectable citizen. Although the hero of the novel finds his new lifestyle unbearable, he puts up with it.

There is a turning point when Huckleberry's aggressive father takes him away from his new home. Huckleberry manages to escape from his father and sets off on a journey of exploration down the Mississippi river. On his travels he meets Jim, a man escaping from slavery. They share a lot of incredible adventures and Huckleberry starts questioning the values of a society that treats fellow human beings as inferior.

All in all, The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn is an appealing story. And although it is full of light-hearted moments and gripping action, the author also uses the novel as a vehicle to expose the stupidity of prejudice. This makes it an entertaining and thought-provoking story that I would thoroughly recommend to anyone who is a fan of the classics.

- 2 Find an underlined phrase which is used to:

- 1 talk about the book's message.
- 2 explain the plot.

Reading tip

When you read an article that you will have to answer questions on, underline or note down the key words that appear in each paragraph.

READ

1 Read the Reading tip. Read the text. Which of the following topics are mentioned in the article?

- 1 Training police officers to use face reading when dealing with the public.
- 2 Research on the recognition of emotions.
- 3 The manipulation of emotions and feelings.
- 4 Learning how to control the emotions you show in public.
- 5 Documenting the expressions used by humans to show emotion.
- 6 Films made by Ekman.

It's written all over your face!

We have all developed ways of hiding our true feelings. Who hasn't answered the question 'How are you?' with a forced smile and a 'Fine, thanks' when the opposite is the case? In fact, most of us think we can keep our feelings to ourselves by using a few appropriate words which will stop further questioning. Furthermore, people who frequently appear in public often receive training on how to make their body language support, rather than contradict what they are saying. However, there are a few people who have an innate ability to notice the difference between the words a person uses, and what is written on their face. What's more, with a little patience, we can all learn to detect the inconsistencies between a speaker's words and what they really feel.

Until the 1960s, it was believed that facial expressions differed from culture to culture. Psychologist Paul Ekman, from California University, decided to test this theory by travelling the world with photos of men and women displaying different emotions. He met people such as tribes in the jungles of Papua New Guinea and stressed commuters in Tokyo but found that everybody agreed on what emotions were shown on the faces in his photos. An angry face to a Libyan was also an angry face to an Argentinean. But his research also led to another conclusion: there are people who can tell if someone is lying or

- 1 Only a small number of people
 - a naturally detect how people really think or feel.
 - b automatically match their body language to their words.
 - c don't believe what public speakers say.
 - d always use forced facial expressions.
- 2 Psychologist Paul Ekman from California University
 - a proved that people use different facial expressions in different countries.
 - b travelled the world to take photos of people making different expressions.
 - c carried videos with him on his travels.
 - d disproved an accepted theory.
- 3 People from very different cultures
 - a know when someone is lying or telling the truth.
 - b recognize the same facial expressions.

 - c reduced the number of mental and heart patients needing treatment.
 - d been criticized by psychiatrists.

telling the truth, or if someone is unpleasant or friendly, just by looking at their face. The big question, of course, was how.

In an attempt to answer that question, Ekman decided to study the human face in great detail. Over the next seven years he examined every facial expression that the muscles could make. He then created a library of thousands of facial expressions. Each expression was associated with a human emotion and he catalogued them all in a 500-page document. It contains descriptions and illustrations of all the different human emotions that the face can show.

Then Ekman made an important discovery. He found that it's impossible for people to always hide their true feelings. He spent hours watching video film of people speaking in public and discovered that even the best prepared speakers were not always able to control their facial expressions. He saw that when people deliberately try to hide their emotions, a very brief facial expression lasting less than a second, flashes across their faces. These expressions, named 'microexpressions' by Ekman, are the ones that reveal a speaker's real feelings. Ekman realized that if a person was trained to look out for these microexpressions they could learn more about the speaker's emotions. The secrets that only naturally-gifted face readers had been able to detect, could now be studied by everybody.

Since then, lots of practical applications have been found for Ekman's painstaking research. Psychiatrists use it to help them detect the true mental state of their patients, cardiologists use it to check on how their heart patients really feel, and police forces use it when interrogating suspects. It has even been used by the makers of computer-created cartoon films such as Shrek and Toy Story to make sure their characters' faces reflect real human emotions. Ekman's work has shown that when we are in a conversation we should watch as well as listen carefully to what people are saying. That way we can perhaps learn even more than we expected.

UNDERSTANDING IDEAS

Answer the questions. Look at the text, and use your own words and ideas.

In today's world of global travel you need to be a good student of both English and international body language. Although someone may understand every word you say, a gesture that is acceptable in your culture might cause problems in theirs. Here are a few tips for when you go abroad.

- Although moving your head up and down means 'yes' in many countries, the same movement in Bulgaria and Nepal means 'no'.
- Eye contact can cause different problems in different cultures. In both North and South America good eye contact is important. Avoiding eye contact suggests lack of interest. However, in several Asian and some African countries, continuous eye contact is considered a sign of a lack of respect.
- When you pass something to someone in the Middle East, do it with your right hand. In Japan, use both of them to pass each object, even small ones such as business cards.

Determiners and quantifiers

Determiners come before nouns and they include the articles a, an and the:

A bow is made when Japanese people greet visitors. The Chinese point at things with their hands.

Some determiners, known as quantifiers, tell us how much or how many. Some examples are each, every (singular nouns), few, many and several (plural nouns) In Spain and several South American countries, many people point with their chins.

We use these quantifiers, except for every, with the preposition of when they come before pronouns: Don't use gestures such as pointing with a finger or a thumb. Both of them are considered rude.

- 2 Read the Learn this! box. Match the blue determiners in the text with the definitions below.

- 1 a small number of something
- 2 a large number of people or things
- 3 the things, people, etc. in a group of two or more considered separately
- 4 the members of a group of three or more considered in general
- 5 an amount that is not exact, but fewer than many
- 6 two people or things together

GRAMMAR

Verb patterns: -ing or infinitive form?

EXPLORE

- 1 Look at the pictures (1–3). Which person do you think has the best chance of doing well in the interview? Why? Read the text and find out if your answer is correct.

You have to remember to prepare carefully for an interview, but few candidates stop to think about their body language. However, the ability to control it can help you. First, study the interviewer's gestures and mirror them. When two people get on well they copy each other's movements subconsciously. In an interview, by intentionally making the same gestures as the interviewer, you can improve your connection with them. However, if you try copying them too quickly, they will feel uncomfortable. Secondly, show that you are listening carefully by adopting certain positions. Sit up straight, lean forward slightly and nod occasionally. Furthermore, avoid crossing your arms as it will seem that you don't accept what the interviewer is saying. Finally, practise good body posture before you go to the interview. You won't regret doing it when you go on to get what you hope for!

LEARN THIS!

Some verbs can be followed by both the gerund and the infinitive form.

- With some verbs, the gerund refers to an action earlier than the main verb and the infinitive refers to an action at the same time or a later time than the main verb:

He remembers playing against our team last year.

Remember to phone your dad this evening.

I'll never forget flying for the first time when I was a child.

He's forgotten to bring his books for the next class.

I regretted telling him what I'd said in the interview.

I regret to tell you that you won't be working with us.

My mum stopped working last month.

They stopped to have a break before revising maths.

- With other verbs there are other differences:

Go on + gerund means 'continue'. Go on + infinitive means 'change'.

She asked them to be quiet, but they went on chatting.

After leaving university, he went on to do research.

Try + gerund means 'do something to see what will happen'. Try + infinitive means 'make an effort'.

Try copying the interviewee's gestures.

I tried to study but I was too tired and I fell asleep.

The verbs begin, continue and start can also be followed by gerunds or infinitives with no difference in meaning. However, when they are used in a continuous form, they are followed by an infinitive:

We're starting to organize this year's poetry competition.

WRITING

An email or informal letter

READ

Read the letter and identify three characteristics of Londoners mentioned by the writer.

Hi Ahmed,

Thanks for your email. Great to hear that you're coming over to study in London next year. Of course I'll give you a hand to settle in. In fact, my mum has told me to tell you that we'll give you a roof over your head until you find somewhere to live near the university.

I also thought it might be a good idea to give you the low-down on what to expect from Londoners when you get here. Although London is a very cosmopolitan city, everybody seems to conform to the London way of doing things. That means that even if many of the passengers on the packed tube come from all over the world, there is total silence and they all seem to be hiding behind their newspapers!

Another thing is the language. I'm sure your teachers have taught you that the English really appreciate polite expressions such as 'please' and 'after you'. That's true, but by and large the most important word is 'sorry'! Londoners use it constantly, but not only to apologize – they also use it when someone does something bad to them! I stood on someone's foot in a queue (Londoners' favourite activity!) the other day and in a flash they moved it and said 'Sorry'! In a nutshell, Londoners will seem strange at first, but you'll soon get used to us!

Anyway, I've got to finish now. Writing this email has helped me put off doing my exam revision for a while but I can't avoid it for ever! I'll be in touch with more info on Londoners soon! Say 'hi' to your folks for me!

Catch up soon!

The Smile

by William Blake

*There is a smile of love,
And there is a smile of deceit,
And there is a smile of smiles
In which these two smiles meet;*

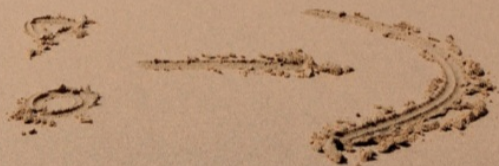

*And there is a frown of hate,
And there is a frown of disdain,
And there is a frown of frowns
Which you strive to forget in vain,*

*For it sticks in the heart's deep core,
And it sticks in the deep back bone,
And no smile that ever was smil'd,
But only one smile alone*

*That betwixt the cradle and grave
It only once smil'd can be,
But when it once is smil'd,
There's an end to all misery.*

Biography

William Blake was born in 1757 in London. He never went to school and was educated at home by his mother. At the age of 14 he was sent to work at an artist's studio and he then went on to study art at the Royal Academy. Blake used his artistic skills to illustrate books and he also wrote his own books of poetry. Although today he is considered one of the greatest artists and poets that Britain has ever produced, he died a very poor man.

SKILLS ROUND-UP 9–10

Native Americans

READ

- 1 Read the text quickly. What problems did the Arapaho have with the European settlers?

THOSE WHO FLY

The Arapaho people have always hunted buffalos. When they detected the animals in their area, they quickly packed their belongings and the whole tribe was hunting in less than an hour. Among the Arapaho there was a special group of young men who had to carry messages between the members of the tribe during hunting expeditions. They ran so fast, it was said, that their feet didn't touch the ground. They were called 'those who fly'.

The arrival of European immigrants on the lands of the Arapaho, however, soon slowed the tribe down. The Europeans killed the buffalo and left them without their main source of food and clothing. The Arapaho chiefs, desperate to find food for their people, made peace with the settlers and agreed to go and live on a reservation, an area of land that the Native Americans had to stay on.

Life on reservations has been hard for all the Native Americans tribes. They were nomadic people, and they found it difficult to have to stay in one place. And although they have managed to preserve their customs, they have had problems adapting to a new way of life. As a result, many young people today leave school with no qualifications and there are a lot of unemployed young adults. However, despite the difficulties, there is one group of young Arapaho men that are flying again.

This group of Arapaho flyers are all members of the Wyoming Indian High School basketball team. The team has been state champions a record seven times and won a record 50 consecutive matches. Such success came to the attention of the media and a film, Chiefs, was made about the players and their lives on the reservation. The fastest members of the tribe have become messengers once again. This time, however, the message is not about hunting, but about hope for the future. If young Arapaho Native Americans can find success in school sport, they can find it in all types of school activities.

- 2 Read the text again. Are the sentences true or false?

- 1 The Arapaho were messengers for other Native American tribes.
- 2 The buffalo provided the Arapaho with food and clothing.
- 3 The Arapaho went to live on the reservation so that they could eat.
- 4 Most Native American tribes adapted quickly to life on the reservations.
- 5 Native Americans didn't use to stay in the same place.
- 6 Many young Native Americans prefer to continue their studies instead of looking for work.
- 7 Some young Arapaho Native Americans attend the Wyoming Indian High School.
- 8 The members of the basketball team are a positive example for other Native Americans.

- 3 Answer the questions. Use your own words and ideas.

- 1 Why do you think life on a reservation was difficult for people who had been nomads?

GRAMMAR REFERENCE 5

The passive

We make passive forms with the verb be + the past participle.

The tense of a passive sentence is formed by the verb to be.

The site is protected by the National Museum.

The buildings have been restored.

We use the passive

- to say what the result of an action is. We are not interested in who did it or we don't know who did it.
Nokia mobile phones are made in Finland.
- to describe a process. It is also used in formal documents.
The monuments were taken down brick by brick and then they were rebuilt on the new site.
A new law has been introduced to regulate the traffic in the historic area of the city.
- when it's obvious who did something
He was operated on at Walsgrave Hospital.
- with an agent when we think it is important to say who did something or what caused something to happen. The agent is introduced at the end of the sentence with the preposition by.
The second goal was scored by Klose.
The trees have been blown down by the wind.

The impersonal passive

We make impersonal passive forms with It followed by verbs such as believe, consider, estimate, expect, feel, know, report, say, and think in the passive form. The passive form is followed by that and a clause.

It's estimated that the new library will open next year.

We use the impersonal passive

- in formal language to introduce an idea, opinion or belief that a lot of people have or had.
It was believed that the Earth was flat.

Get / have something done

To form this structure we use the verbs get or have followed by an object and a past participle.

I got my hair cut yesterday.

We'll have our house decorated next month.

We use get / have something done

- to say that we arrange for somebody to do something for us.
We don't do it ourselves.
I had my moped repaired.
Alice gets her shopping delivered to her flat.

GRAMMAR REFERENCE 6

Reported speech

We use reported speech

- when we want to report something that another person has said.

'I've had a really fantastic day!' He said he had had a fantastic day.

When we use reported speech

- we usually change the tense of the verb.

direct speech	reported speech
present simple	past simple present continuous	past continuous present perfect simple	past perfect simple present perfect continuous	past perfect continuous past simple	past perfect simple
past continuous	past perfect continuous

- we often change pronouns, personal, possessive and demonstrative adjectives and time adverbs.

'I returned from holiday last week' John told me he had returned from holiday the week before.

'This book is mine.' She said that book was hers.

- some auxiliary verbs change form and some don't.

direct speech	reported speech
will	would can	could may	might must	had to have to	had to might	might could	could would	would
ought to	ought to should	should

We don't change the tense in reported speech

- when we are reporting something that is always true.

'The temperature drops quickly in the desert at night.'

The teacher said the temperature drops quickly in the desert at night.

- when we are reporting a habit.

'My brother's always criticising what I do.'

Sharon told me her brother's always criticising what she does.

- when we are reporting a future event that hasn't taken place yet.

'I'm going to study at Oxford University next year.'

She said she's going to study at Oxford University next year.

Reported questions

In reported questions

- the subject comes before the verb as in a normal sentence. We don't use question marks.

'What time is it?' Mike asked me what time it was.

- we don't use auxiliary verbs at the beginning of questions that give a yes / no answer. We introduce the questions with if or whether.

'Do you like painting?' She asked me if I liked painting.

'Is it raining?' He asked us whether it was raining.

- we repeat the question words used in the original questions. 'Where did you see Ruth?' Mum asked us where we had seen Ruth.

Reporting verbs

We can use other reporting verbs to introduce reported statements. These verbs are used with different structures and some verbs can be used with more than one structure.

- verb + infinitive with to: agree, ask, decide, offer, promise, refuse, threaten
He refused to get up.
- verb + object + (not) infinitive with to: advise, beg, encourage, invite, order, remind, warn
He invited us to dinner at a French restaurant.
- verb + that + clause: admit, agree, claim, demand, explain, recommend, request, suggest
She explained that we have to leave early.
- verb + object + that + clause: assure, convince, inform
They convinced me that I need to buy a new phone.
- verb + gerund: admit, deny, mention, recommend, report, suggest
She suggested speaking to the manager.
- verb + object + preposition + gerund: accuse sb of, blame sb for, congratulate sb on, warn sb about
He accused me of stealing the books.
- verb + preposition + gerund: accuse of, apologise for, admit to, confess to, insist on
She apologised for breaking the glass.

We can also use other reporting verbs to introduce reported questions apart from ask. These verbs are used with the same structures.

Frank	wanted to know enquired wondered	where we were going on Friday night.
Alice	wanted to know enquired wondered	if whether	I had already seen the film.

Subject and object questions

When the question word at the beginning of a question

- is the object, it is followed by a verb in the interrogative form.
Who do you play tennis with? (I play tennis with) Julia.
Which CD did you buy? (I bought) a classical music CD.
- is the subject, it is followed by a verb in the affirmative form.
Who played tennis last night? Julia and Ann (played tennis last night).
Which CD sells the most? A traditional music CD (sells the most).

Reply questions

We use reply questions

- to ask for more information about something we've heard. They are very short and formed by a question word or a question word and a preposition or an object pronoun, an adverb or a negative word (not).
Tom is coming round. When?
We're going to the cinema. Who with?
You've got to wash up the dishes. Why me?
We're going to have the meeting in this office. Why here?
I can't help you with your homework. Why not?

Question tags

We use question tags

- to ask for confirmation of what we have said. When the main verb in the statement is affirmative the question tag is negative. When the main verb in the statement is negative the question tag is positive.

George is ill, isn't he?

Maria doesn't smoke, does she?

If we use an auxiliary or modal verb in the statement, we repeat it in the question tag. If we don't use an auxiliary or modal verb in the statement, we use the correct form of do in the question tag.

Andy can't swim, can he?

They cooked a delicious lunch, didn't they?

Some question tags have slightly different rules.

- If somebody / someone or everybody / everyone is used as the subject of the statement, the pronoun they is used in the question tag.

Everyone likes fish, don't they?

- If nothing, something or everything is used as the subject of the statement, the pronoun it is used in the question tag.

Everything is ready for dad's birthday, isn't it?

- If there is the subject of the statement, there is used in the question tag.

There's some milk in the fridge, isn't there?

- If the statement begins with Let's, we use shall in the question tag.

Let's go to see the new exhibition, shall we?

- If I am is used in the statement, aren't I is used in the question tag.

I'm going to play in the match, aren't I?

- If I'm not is used in the statement, am I is used in the question tag.

I'm not late for the meeting, am I?

- If an imperative is used in the statement, will is used in the question tag.

Close the door when you come in, will you?

Emphatic do

We use emphatic do

- to add emphasis to a sentence. It is stressed in spoken English.

I really did enjoy the meal.

- to contradict a negative sentence. It is also stressed in spoken English.

They didn't tell Jack about the meeting.

They did tell him! He's just arrived.

GRAMMAR BUILDER 7

1 Write subject or object questions for the underlined words in the sentences.

6 Contradict the negative sentences.

- You never win at tennis.
- Ellen didn't answer the question.
- Alex doesn't know how to swim.
- They didn't bring their mobile phones.

GRAMMAR REFERENCE 8

Mixed conditionals

We use mixed conditionals

- to talk about unreal situations that happen at different times. The time reference in the if clause is different to the time reference in the result clause.

Third conditional

Second conditional

Unreal past (past perfect)

Unreal present (would + infinitive)

If I had done my homework, the teacher wouldn't be angry.

If we had phoned the hotel earlier, we would have a room now.

Second conditional

Third conditional

Unreal present (past simple)

Unreal past (would have + past participle)

If I was a better player, the coach would have chosen me for the school team.

If they weren't on holiday this week, we would have invited them to dinner.

Might be / Might have been

We use

- might be to talk about less certain present results in conditional sentences.
If you had studied harder at school, you might be at university now.
- might have + past participle to talk about less certain past results in conditional sentences.
If he had a car, he might have given us a lift.

I wish / If only

We use

- I wish and If only with the past simple to say that we want a present situation to be different. After I wish or If only we can use were instead of was.
I wish mum were here.
If only I knew the answers to the questions.
- I wish and If only with the past perfect to say that we want a past situation to have been different.
I wish they had told me about the news.
If only you hadn't forgotten to bring the tickets!

Should have done

We use

- should have + past participle to talk about what would have been the right thing to do in the past.
They got lost on the way to the hotel. They should have taken a map.

GRAMMAR BUILDER 8

- I haven't got any money on me. (He / go / the bank)
- I'm freezing! (She / put on / warm clothes)
- I'm late! (He / leave / earlier)

GRAMMAR REFERENCE 9

Object relative clauses

We use defining relative clauses to give important information that helps identify the person, thing or place we are talking about.

That's the teacher who is going to be in charge of the English department.

I saw the bike that Mike wants to buy.

- The relative pronouns who, which and that can be the subject or object of the defining relative clause.

There's the bus which goes to the stadium.

which is the subject

Diana's the girl who I met at the exhibition.

who is the object. I is the subject

- We can leave out the relative pronouns who, which and that when they are the object of the defining relative clause.

Diana's the girl (who) I met at the exhibition.

I saw the film (which) Sandra had told me about.

I've brought the CD (that) you wanted to borrow.

Relative clauses with prepositions

If a relative clause includes a preposition, we can often put it at the beginning or at the end of the clause. If it is used at the beginning, it sounds more formal.

That was the day which my parents got married on.

That was the day on which my parents got married.

- We replace who with the more formal relative pronoun whom when we use a preposition before it.

Where is the man who you were speaking to earlier?

Where is the man to whom you were speaking earlier?

- We can replace some relative pronouns with which and a preposition.

That's the year in which / when the school was founded.

Monday is the day on which / when the interview is.

He told me the reason for which / why he didn't come.

Manchester was an industrial city in which / where there were a lot of factories.

Is there a shop at which / where I can buy batteries near here?

Reduced relative clauses

In a reduced relative clause we leave out the relative pronoun when it is the subject of the relative clause.

We also leave out the verb to be. We can't form reduced relative clauses when the relative pronoun is the object of the relative clause.

Some of the people (who were) in the shop started complaining about the service.

Someone (who has been) shopping here has forgotten their wallet.

Cars (which are) designed in Italy are usually very stylish.

Queen Victoria, (who was) Queen of England for 63 years, had nine children.

- We sometimes use reduced relative clauses with present or past participles after there is / was and there are / were.

There's a young man (who is) riding a horse.

There were some dirty trainers (which were) left at the door.

GRAMMAR BUILDER 9

1 Decide if the relative pronoun is the subject or object of the defining relative clause.

- 1 We went to the exhibition which is on at the Fulton Museum. subject
- 2 That's the teacher who will teach us English next year.

- 3 Do you know the boy who Harry is talking to? _____
- 4 The book which I bought was by Jane Austen. _____
- 5 That's the author who writes those children's books.

- 6 We stayed at a hotel which is in the centre of the city.

- 7 We went to the bookshop that John works in. _____
- 8 They write short stories which the teacher puts on the school website. _____

2 Decide which relative pronouns can be left out and rewrite the sentences without them.

- 1 She's the girl who is my sister's best friend.
- 2 Alice is the student which I sit next to in class.
- 3 That's the doctor who I go to see.
- 4 I want to read the magazine that Mary told me about.
- 5 Did you see the programme which was about Amsterdam?
- 6 We went to the shop that you bought your new suit from.

3 Four of the sentences contain mistakes. Find and correct them.

- 1 I saw him on the day at which we started our school holidays.
- 2 Your granddad died the year in which we got married.
- 3 The girl to who I was chatting is my cousin.
- 4 We told dad the reason for what we wanted to go to school early.
- 5 He lives in the town on which William Shakespeare was born.
- 6 We went to the museum at which there is the new exhibition.

4 Replace each which and preposition combination with just one relative pronoun.

- 1 It was the day on which my book was published.
- 2 We don't know the reason for which he didn't come.
- 3 This is the place in which my Dad was born.
- 4 It's the bookshop at which there is a discount for students.
- 5 It happened the year in which the war finished.
- 6 A horror story was the reason for which I couldn't sleep last night!

5 Rewrite the sentences as reduced relative clauses.

- 1 That man who is walking towards us is my uncle.
- 2 There was a camera which was left on the table.
- 3 Klose, who is a footballer from Poland, has spent most of his life in Germany.
- 4 There is a dog which is barking loudly in the garden.
- 5 The computer which was delivered two days ago has already broken down.
- 6 The customers who were in the restaurant started singing traditional songs.

6 Join the sentences without using relative pronouns.

- 1 This book is fascinating. I borrowed it from the library.
This book (which) I borrowed from the library is fascinating.
- 2 The play was very good. My brother performed in it.
- 3 The girl is very friendly. I sit next to her in class.
- 4 Andy is an Irish boy. I met him last week.
- 5 The teacher is getting married next week. I have maths lessons with him.
- 6 That car is very expensive. My neighbour bought it last week.

GRAMMAR REFERENCE 10

Determiners

Determiners come before a noun or an adjective + a noun and they introduce and classify them.

We saw an interesting film at the cinema last night.

- We use the indefinite article a / an to mention something for the first time.
I got a new computer for my birthday.
to say what someone's job is.
My mum's a doctor at the local hospital.
to introduce a general example of something.
I'm hungry. Let's ask someone if there's a restaurant near here.
- We use the definite article the to mention something that has been mentioned before.
He's going to a university in London. The university is in south London. to talk about something that is unique.
Although it was late at night, I could see clearly thanks to the moonlight.
to talk about people and things that are familiar to everybody.
Grill saw the doctor yesterday.
- We use the with the names of buildings or places. We don't use the with these words when we refer to the activities that take place in them.
They are going to close the school in our street.
I'm staying late at school tonight because there is volleyball practice.

Quantifiers

Some determiners are quantifiers, words which tell us how much or how many.

- We use all with countable and uncountable nouns.
All the bread and all the pizzas are included in the price.
- We use both with countable nouns to talk about two things.
Both cars involved in the accident were completely destroyed.
- We use each and every with singular countable nouns. We use each when the people or things it refers to are seen individually. We use every when we see all the people or things it refers to as a group.
Each student will be given their own locker.
Every student must complete 10 essays in the first term.
- We use (a) few with countable nouns and (a) little with uncountable nouns.
He says he's got a few good friends.
Could I have a little water, please?
- We use many with countable nouns and much with uncountable nouns.
How many days have we got to finish the project?
There isn't much food for dinner.
- We use several with countable nouns.
Several clients would like to speak to the manager.
- All of the above quantifiers, with the exception of every, are followed by the preposition of when we use them with a pronoun.
He gave a glass of cold water to both of them.
The interviewer asked each of us some very difficult questions.

-ing or infinitive form

A few verbs can be followed by both gerunds and infinitives, with a difference in meaning.

When we use remember, forget, stop or regret with

- an -ing form, the verbs refer to things we did in the past.
He doesn't remember switching off the oven before he left home.
I'll never forget meeting the President. It was a great honour.
Sue stopped working at the library six months ago.
We regret leaving the match before the end. Liverpool scored two goals in the last five minutes!
- an infinitive form, they refer to things that we have to do at the moment of speaking or in the future.
Please remember to turn off the computer when you've finished using it.
Don't forget to tell Mary to text me.
Let's stop to have a coffee.
I regret to say that the school trip has been cancelled.

When we use go on with

- an -ing form, it means to continue an activity.
The rain started on Monday morning and it went on raining all week.
- an infinitive form, it means to change an activity.
We discussed the company's financial situation and then went on to look at the new products.

When we use try with

- an -ing form, it means to say what will happen if you do something.
Have you tried pushing the car down the hill? It might start then.
- an infinitive form, it means to make an effort.
You have to try to work harder if you want to pass your exams.

We can use hate, like, love, and prefer with both -ing forms or infinitives with little difference in meaning.

She hates watching football. She hates to watch football.
We love climbing mountains. We love to climb mountains.

When we use hate, like, love, and prefer with would, they are followed by an infinitive form.

They would prefer to eat at home. We would like to go to a Chinese restaurant.

We can use begin, continue and start with both -ing forms or infinitives with little difference in meaning.

He started running marathons when he was 15. He started to run marathons when he was 15.

When begin, continue and start are used in a continuous form, they are followed by an infinitive form.

I was starting to cook lunch when the electricity went off.
