The Circus

6 Read

Have you ever been to a circus? How much do you know about circuses?

- ★ Circuses began in ancient Rome. They included chariot racing and wild animals.

- The first modern circus was in London in 1768. An Englishman, Philip Astley, opened a circus with horses and riders.

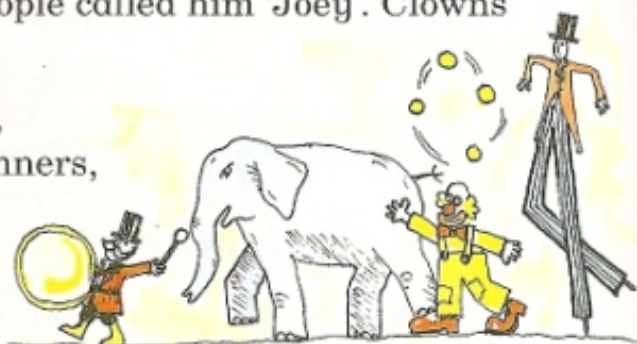

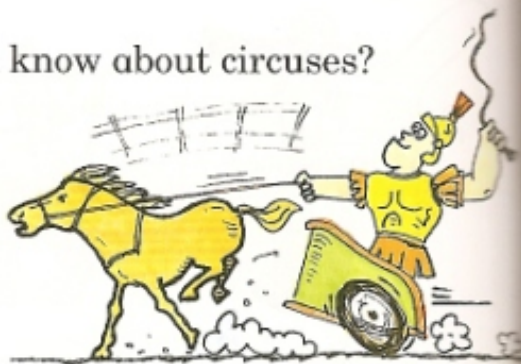

- ★ The first big circuses were in America. At first they were in special buildings. Then they moved from town to town with a tent. The first travelling circus was in 1880.

- The circus tent is called the big top. Inside the tent there is a circus ring. The audience sit on wooden seats around the ring.

- ★ The ringmaster comes into the ring at the start of the circus. He introduces the performers. The most popular performers are the clowns. They wear silly clothes and have painted faces.

- The first real clown was an actor called Joseph Grimaldi. He invented the clown's clothes and painted face. People called him 'Joey'. Clowns today are often called 'Joey'.

Check your facts!

We live on the planet Earth. We say that the Earth is round but it is flatter at the top and the bottom. It is 12,714 kilometres from north to south and 12,757 kilometres across the Equator.

About 70 per cent of the Earth's surface is water. There is more water south of the Equator than north of it. Over 80 per cent of the people on Earth live north of the Equator. The Pacific Ocean, the biggest ocean, is three times bigger than Asia, the largest continent.

The Earth is one of nine planets which go around the Sun. It takes 365 days for the Earth to go around the Sun.

The Earth is the third nearest planet to the Sun. It is 150,000,000 kilometres from the Sun. Only Venus and Mercury are nearer.

The Sun is 1,392,000 kilometres across. It is much bigger than the Earth. It is very, very hot at the centre of the Sun. The temperature is 15,000,000 degrees.

The Moon is 3,476 kilometres across. This means that the Earth is four times bigger. The moon is 384,365 kilometres from the Earth. It is nearer than any of the other planets to Earth. It takes 27 days for the Moon to go around the Earth.

PART 1
The first dinosaurs

1 Read

Hundreds of millions of years ago there were no land animals. The first animals were water creatures. Some of these water creatures began to crawl onto dry land. Their bodies began to change. They slowly changed into land animals.

Some of these animals developed legs for walking. They lived both on land and in water. They had smooth, soft skin and tails for swimming. They laid their eggs in water too. These animals were the first amphibians.

Some of these amphibians slowly changed into new animals. They developed stronger and straighter legs. They laid their eggs on land. These new animals were the first reptiles. Dinosaurs were reptiles. They lived for more than 150 million years. They lived – and died – a long time before the first people.

PART 2

How we know about dinosaurs

When some dinosaurs died, their bones stayed in the ground. The bones stayed there for thousands of years and turned to stone. These stony bones are called fossils.

When scientists find fossils, they dig them up, wrap them and put them in boxes. Later they try and build a skeleton with the fossils. Then they can find out what the dinosaur looked like.

Diplodocus was very big. It was as heavy as two elephants. It had four legs, a long neck and a long tail. Its back legs were longer and stronger than its front legs. Sometimes it stood on its back legs and ate leaves from trees.

Some museums have dinosaur skeletons. You can go and see them for yourself.

Some facts about dinosaurs

The biggest

Seismosaurus was probably about 30 metres long. It ate plants and leaves from tall trees. When it lifted its neck, it was as tall as a four-storey building.

The fastest

Struthiomimus was the fastest runner. It probably ran as fast as 45 kilometres an hour. It had long back legs and big feet.

The most famous

Tyrannosaurus was fourteen metres long. It had very strong teeth. It was the biggest meat-eating dinosaur. It ate other dinosaurs.

The most intelligent

Saurornithoides was a small dinosaur. It was only two metres long. Its brain was as big as a bird's. It was probably more intelligent than any of today's reptiles.

The most stupid

Stegosaurus was more than seven metres long. Its brain was the same size as that of Saurornithoides but it wasn't as intelligent. Its brain was very small in comparison with the size of its body.

At the North Pole it gets very cold in winter. The temperature can be minus 40 degrees. Panerak Simigak is an Inuit girl. She is twelve years old. Panerak lives in a village near the North Pole with her parents and two brothers.

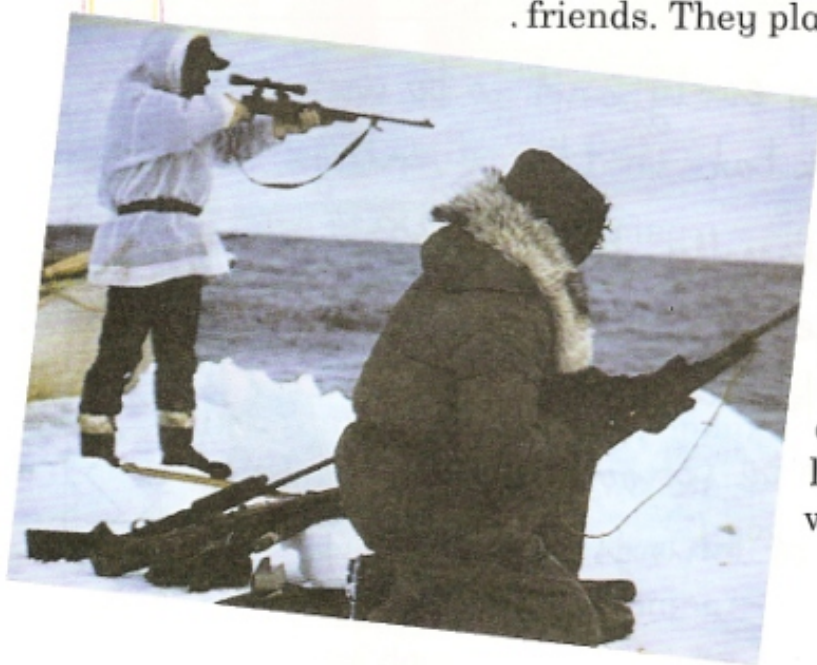

The village is very small. Only seventy Inuit live there. The Simigaks live in a wooden house in the centre of the village. They've got two rooms – a small room for sleeping and a larger living room and kitchen. The Simigaks burn coal on a stove because there isn't any gas or electricity in the village. There is no running water either. Panerak's father collects pieces of ice. Her mother melts the ice on the stove and they use the water for drinking and washing.

There is no television in the village either. The Simigaks often visit friends in their homes. Panerak visits an old woman once a week. The old woman tells stories from long ago. Panerak likes these stories.

Panerak goes to school in the village. After school she plays with her friends. They play in the snow. Her brothers are too old to go to the village school. They go to school in the nearest town. It is eighty kilometres away.

Panerak's father is a hunter. He kills animals – polar bears, reindeer, foxes, rabbits, seals and whales. Panerak's brothers sometimes go hunting with their father. But they don't want to be hunters when they leave school. And Panerak wants to work in a shop!

Until about a hundred years ago the Inuit lived a traditional life. They moved from place to place to find food. They kept dogs to pull their sledges across the snow and ice. The Inuit lived in small groups with a few families in each group. All the men were hunters. They hunted and caught animals, birds and fish.

In winter the Inuit built houses of earth and stones; in summer they lived in tents made of animal skins. The men used ice to build igloos when they were away hunting. They melted ice to make water too.

Most of the time the Inuit ate only meat. They sometimes ate fish and eggs too. They caught most of their food in summer. The men caught whales in summer. They used long spears to catch them. In summer they caught fish too. They used stones to trap the fish. Then they stood in the water and speared them. They caught seals in winter. The seals stayed under the ice. They made holes in the ice for breathing. The men killed them when they came up for air.

Animals gave the Inuit everything they needed. They made clothes, tents and bags from their skins. They used their bones to make tools and spears. They built their boats and sledges with both skins and bones.

But the life of the Inuit has changed. They use snowmobiles today instead of dog sledges and guns instead of spears. Life is more comfortable but the old skills and culture might disappear for ever.

6 Read about the rules at Helen's school

We have to go to school five days a week. We don't have to go on Saturdays or Sundays.

We have twelve weeks' holiday a year. The longest holiday is in the summer. We don't have to go to school in August at all.

We have lessons in the mornings and in the afternoons. We have to stay at school at lunchtime. We don't have to have school lunch – we can bring sandwiches from home. There is a dining room at our school. We mustn't eat our lunch in the classroom.

We mustn't stay in the classroom at playtime. We have to go into the playground. We don't have to go outside when it's raining. We can stay in the classroom then. But we must sit quietly. We mustn't make too much noise.

We have to wear uniform at our school. The boys have to wear blue trousers and jumpers. The girls have to wear blue skirts and jumpers. The girls can wear earrings but they mustn't wear necklaces or bracelets.

JEWELLERY THIEF MYSTERY

Police today are looking for a jewellery thief. The thief took necklaces and bracelets from the houses of three women yesterday afternoon. The women were all at home when the robberies happened.

'At one o'clock I was going into the kitchen,' said Mrs Book, 'when I saw something on the floor. It was a necklace. I picked it up and went into the bedroom. I opened my jewellery box. All my silver bracelets were missing.'

'It was two o'clock and I was tidying the bedroom,' said Mrs Hill. 'I looked in my jewellery box. There was nothing there. All my jewellery was missing.'

'I was lying down at about three o'clock,' said Mrs Park, 'when I felt something on the bed. I got up and put on my glasses. I saw my gold necklace on the bed and my gold earrings on the floor under the window. Then I looked in my jewellery box. My gold bracelet was missing. The thief probably escaped through the open window. But the window is very small. It's too small for even a child to climb through.'

Have you lost any jewellery recently? Have you found any jewellery? Who is the jewellery thief? Do you know? Can you help with the mystery? There may be a reward. Please contact the police.

Peter Cook is a champion athlete. He's got gold medals in the 100, 200 and 400 metres. But Peter isn't very famous. And this is because he is blind – he can't see anything.

Peter could see when he was small. But when he was five, he went blind. He then went to a special school and started running there when he was eleven. 'At first I wasn't very good at running. I didn't like it because I was frightened,' he says, 'but my teachers helped me a lot.'

Blind runners have 'seeing partners' when they compete. 'We hold a piece of leather in our hands and run together,' explains Peter. 'My partner runs as fast as me. He is my eyes too.'

Peter's best sport is running but he is also very good at swimming. He could swim a hundred metres when he was five. Swimming is good for blind people because it's something they can do by themselves. They can also play all kinds of games – it's only fast games like tennis which they can't play.

7 True or false?

- 2 He is very good at running.

UNIT 22

I Read

Once upon a time a dog lived in a valley. The valley was between two mountains. There were castles on top of the mountains.

It was six o'clock in the evening. The dog was running around in the valley. He was very hungry. He was looking for his dinner. He was chasing a bird when he heard a noise. It was a trumpet. The noise was coming from the first castle. This meant that it was dinner time there. When the dog heard the trumpet from the first castle, he looked up. 'I can get dinner there,' he said.

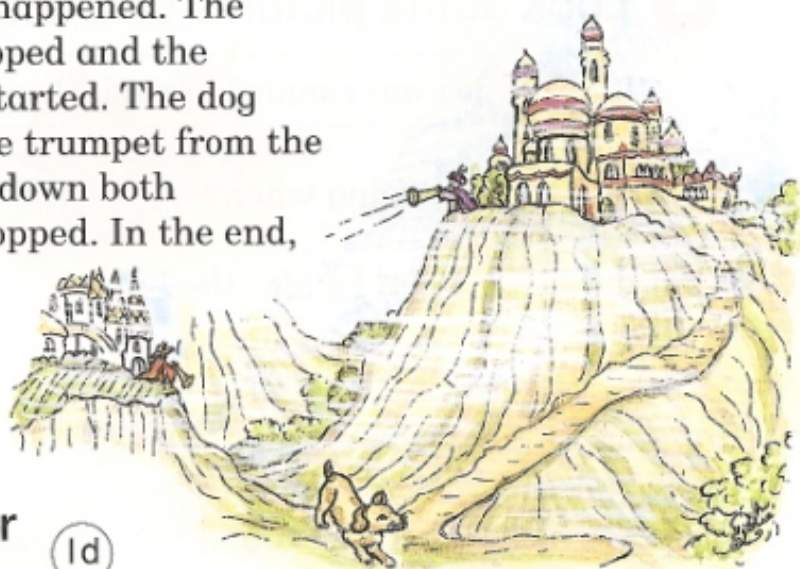

The dog was climbing the mountain when the trumpet stopped. Just then, he heard another trumpet. It was the trumpet from the second castle. When the dog heard the trumpet from the second castle, he stopped. 'I will be late for dinner at the first castle,' he told himself. 'But they're starting dinner at the second castle.' He turned around and rushed to the bottom of the mountain. Then he ran across the valley and started to climb the second mountain.

The dog was half-way up the mountain when the trumpet from the second castle stopped. 'I will be late for dinner here,' he said to himself. 'What should I do?' Just then he heard the trumpet from the first castle again. The dog ran down the second mountain, rushed across the valley and started to climb the first mountain again.

But, once again, the same thing happened. The trumpet from the first castle stopped and the trumpet from the second castle started. The dog turned around when he heard the trumpet from the second castle. He rushed up and down both mountains until the trumpets stopped. In the end, the dog didn't get any dinner!
