VOCABULARY EXTENSION

- 4 Match the phrasal verbs (a-f) with the meanings (1-6). Use a dictionary to help you.

There are lots of extracurricular activities at university so I sometimes find it difficult to (a) get down to work. I go to lectures and (b) take down what the lecturer says. At the end of the day, I (c) go over my notes. But I sometimes (d) hand in assignments late because I always (e) put off writing them until the last minute. I don't know how I'm going to (f) get through my exams at the end of the year!

- read and check
- give work to a teacher or tutor
- pass
- start (to work)
- postpone, do something at a later time
- write (what a person says)

CHOOSING A UNIVERSITY?

READ SOME STUDENTS' TIPS.

A The head of my school wanted me to do a degree in law at a prestigious university. He said it would give me a better chance of getting a job, but I wanted to do something creative so I chose a degree at a university with a good reputation for marketing. It's a vocational course, but it does involve studying economics and psychology, too. People are always asking why I chose this university, but I've been really pleased with my course. One university isn't better than another. The important question is which course is the best fit for you?

TANYA PHILLIPS, MARKETING

B A lot of people start a course and then drop out so it's important to research courses carefully. My film studies degree has a good balance of theory and practical components, which is important for me. We usually have lectures in the morning and then work in the film studio in the afternoon. My friend is forever complaining that his course doesn't offer enough practical work, but he probably didn't find out enough about it before he applied. The other thing is location. I chose to be in London because it's got a vibrant film culture and it's easy to keep up-to-date with popular trends. The only thing I don't like is the cost of rent. I pay much more than friends who are studying in other cities.

JOSH HARRIS, FILM STUDIES

C Going to university is a unique opportunity and, while the course is important, it's more about the student experience. That's why I chose a small campus. It's a close-knit community and the student facilities are excellent. With so many extracurricular activities, it's been easy to make friends. I've been a member of the Debating Society since my first year and now I'm President of the Student Union. I think getting a degree is only part of why we go to university, and the other skills I've learnt will help me to find a job.

ALEX BEAVEN, GEOGRAPHY

D My advice when looking at universities is to think of the three Cs: city life, course modules and career prospects. With the high cost of student fees, you have to think about your career goals. See if the course or uni offers work placement opportunities. I was particularly attracted to my course because it gave me a chance to work for a year. I'm doing my placement now, and I love it! I've worked in different local government departments and, as a result, I know I want to work in education policy when I graduate.

NATASHA STEVENS, POLITICS

E I chose a course at my local university because it's more convenient. I've been living at home this year, which means I've been able to save a lot of money and I won't be so much in debt when I finish. Some of my friends are living in halls of residence and have to do part-time jobs to help pay for their accommodation. My parents understand that I've got a lot of coursework so I don't really have to do chores at home. I think it's good to have the support of your family at uni.

KYLE LAWRENCE, BIOLOGICAL SCIENCES

2 Match the questions (1–9) with the people in 1 (A–E). Some people appear more than once.

Which person ...

- 1 is enjoying the social side of university? C

Hi!

I hope everything's OK. It seems a long time since I heard from you. What have you and your family been doing recently?

I'm trying to decide which universities to apply to. My main decision is about whether to study abroad or not. I've looked at some universities in Australia, and I'd love to go there to study. There are some excellent courses and I could spend my free time doing sports, which I love, as you know!

I'm also considering coming to study in your country. What do you think the advantages are for me doing that? On the other hand, I can see that staying in England is easier. Maybe you could come and study here, or we could both go and study in Australia together! What would you prefer?

This week I've been doing work experience. My school organised some work for me in a fashion designer's studio! It has been fantastic so far. The fashion designer is really nice and I learnt tons about fashion and making clothes. What kind of preparation for leaving school do you get? Write and tell me about it – I'd really like to know.

Write soon!

Bye

WORLD'S TOUGHEST JOBS

The TV series that follows young Brits who agree to take on tough jobs in return for big money. In this week's episode ...

NO SLEEP COUNTING SHEEP

So you think your job is bad? Spare a thought for Jack Taylor, aged 22, whose backbreaking work involved him shearing sheep in scorching temperatures in New Zealand.

Jack is one of the stars of a new show called The World's Toughest Jobs, and he admits that it was the most difficult month of his life. 'I won't lie, it was the most difficult thing I've ever had to do, and we'd get told off if we didn't keep up!' he says. 'We slept in a barn and were up at 4 am six days a week and often didn't get back till 8 pm.'

At the interview, Jack was told that he could make good money if he sheared 300 sheep a day. Some days he only did seven. Still, he returned home at the end of the month with £1,400 and a new sense of self-respect. 'Being able to stick with the job made me realise I could do more than I thought,' he says. Jack now has a new job, but his experience in New Zealand had such an impact that he now plans to go travelling again in the future.

THE SKY'S THE LIMIT

It's been described as one of the most difficult jobs in the world. Sheena Southall, a 22-year-old student, was keen to test her limits when she agreed to appear on the show.

'Although I love studying, I'm always looking for an opportunity to test myself,' she says.

She saw an advert which said: 'Do you want to make some quick cash and do you want to travel?' She applied, went for an interview, and got the job. At the interview she explained how she was prepared for any challenge. Then, just as she was leaving for Singapore she found out that she was going to become a skyscraper window cleaner!

The job was challenging. She had to pull herself up and down carrying heavy water buckets and if she didn't clean the windows properly, they'd tell her to go back and do it again.

But she admits the experience has changed her. As soon as she got back, she finished her studies, graduated, and started looking for a job that would be both exciting and tough. Sheena says: 'Nothing will ever be as exciting and scary as that first day of cleaning windows up in the air, but if you don't face your fears and accept what life offers you how will you know what you're capable of? It was the best experience of my life so far.'

3 Read the article again. Are these statements True (T), False (F) or Not Mentioned (NM) in the text?

GLOBAL STUDENTS

Many students nowadays choose to do a degree in another country. In the UK alone, nearly 20% of undergraduates are international students. In the latest in our 'Global students' series, we find out about their experiences.

HOME | NEWS | COMMENTS | LOG IN | SEARCH | CONTACT

A I chose to study here because the education system is different. At home, our teachers would talk and we'd listen, whereas here I can discuss questions with my classmates and tutors. Having a western degree can help you to get a better job with a higher salary, too. I used to watch TV series back home so I had an idea about the way of life, but it was still a shock. I'm not really a party person, but most students here enjoy partying. I volunteer as a Chinese language teacher, and discussing cultural differences with my students has helped me to adapt. I think the biggest challenge for me is the language. I'd passed English exams before I came, but I still make mistakes and lose marks in assignments.

Xiu, 21, China

B I came here because I'd lived my whole life in the US and I wanted to see something of the world. The UK had always appealed to me because of the culture. People communicate differently, but one main problem is the sense of humour – it took about four months before I understood when people were joking. I expected England to be green with lots of farms, but I've travelled around a bit and it's more diverse than I expected. The best thing about the experience is the people I've met. I plan to stay friends with them when I go home! I missed my family at first, especially at Thanksgiving, and my mom used to call me every day, but now she only calls once a month. I'm doing my own thing and I'm happy.

Beth, 19, the US

C I came here because I was impressed with the facilities and the staff are friendly. In India, teachers are feared and can't be your friends. I can manage my own time, too, and no one worries as long as you do your coursework. In India, parents put a lot of pressure on you because they're concerned about your future and everyone is involved in making decisions. I have some international friends from my hall of residence, but I tend to spend time with other Indians. We celebrate our festivals and play cricket together. At home, my mother would do everything for me, but here I have to do everything myself. I'm not good at cooking so I'm always having takeaways. England is expensive compared to India, especially the accommodation and fees, but luckily my family is paying.

Raghav, 19, India

Listening

- 4 LISTENING 05 Read the beginning of the article. Then listen to five opinions about students working. Choose the opinion each speaker expresses from the list (A–F). Use the letters only once. There is one sentence you do not need.

THE DECLINE OF THE SATURDAY JOB

Serving in a shop or restaurant used to be how teenagers earned pocket money and got their first experience of work. But over the last two decades, the number of students with part-time jobs has fallen, with many feeling the pressure to study rather than work. Some parents believe it's essential to work for money, like the footballer David Beckham and his fashion-designer wife Victoria, whose teenage son has been serving tea and coffee in a coffee shop. Other people believe ...

- A Students don't have time for part-time jobs.
- B Schools need to prepare students for working life.
- C It's impossible for young people to find part-time jobs.
- D Employers don't want to give jobs to students.
- E I don't think young people are interested in working.
- F Work experience helped me to find a full-time job.

Writing

- 5 You have received this email from a friend. Underline the information that you should include in your reply. Write notes about your answers, and then write your email.

Hi!

How are you? I'm planning to come to your country to study this summer, but I'd also like to find a part-time job. Is it easy or difficult to find a job? What type of job do you think I should apply for? What's the best way to find a job?

Write back soon and let me know.

Thanks,

Clara

- Snowboarding is a ..... between surfing and skiing.
- Predictions indicate that flying cars will become ..... within 20 years.
- He ..... the idea of travelling for a year because he didn't have enough money.

WILL CARS SOON BE A THING OF THE PAST?

Imagine a world without cars – a world with no traffic jams, no pollution and no worries about parking. This is the dream of Ollie Mikosza, the inventor of PRT, the Personal Rapid Transit system. PRT is a cross between a taxi, a bus and a cable car. It can take you door to door from your home to any building in a city without any of the inconveniences of driving or waiting for public transport. But will it work?

According to Mikosza, PRT will revolutionise the way we travel in cities. PRT is a system of individual vehicles which travel on metal structures above roads, buildings and even over water. (1) ..... They are controlled by a computer so you simply choose your destination and the computer calculates the fastest and most direct route to get you there, avoiding any possible collisions with other vehicles on the way. (2) .....

PRT has all the benefits of a car and none of the inconveniences of public transport. The podcars are designed to carry only two or three passengers so you don't have to share with strangers. (3) ..... There are no schedules or timetables because the vehicles wait at stations for passengers to arrive, instead of the other way around, and they operate 24 hours a day.

It may sound futuristic, but versions of PRT are already in operation in some places in the world. The oldest and most extensive system is in Morgantown in the US. (4) ..... Around 15,000 students use it every day to travel between university buildings and the city centre. Other cities have considered introducing the PRT system, including Auckland in New Zealand and Amritsar in India. Greenville County Economic Development in the US is meeting later in the year to decide whether or not to go ahead with plans to build a system there. It will cost about $50 million, but the CED believes that it will succeed in reducing traffic problems where other systems have failed.

(5) ..... The podcars are powered by electricity so there is no pollution from exhaust fumes and the vehicles are virtually silent so there is no noise pollution either.

Does this mean that we will all use podcars in cities in the future? Surprisingly, in spite of the many advantages, it seems that PRT isn't going to be the norm anytime soon. One of the main drawbacks of the system, critics say, is that the metal structures used to carry the podcars are unattractive. (6) .....

However, Mikosza isn't going to give up on his dream. He plans to build tunnels for vehicles to travel through in areas of beauty or with particular historic interest, although these tunnels will make the system more expensive to build.

Interestingly, he also points out that more than a century passed between the invention of the first car and their widespread use. So perhaps we will see PRT in operation at some time in the future, if not in the next few years.

1 Match 1–5 with a–e to complete the rules about future tenses.

We use ...

GRAMMAR CHALLENGE

4 Find ten extra words in the text.

My brother is one of those people who will know exactly where he will be and what he'll be doing at any time in the future. For example, he's going to be go to university to study medicine next year. In five years' time, he'll have been finished his course and he'll be working as a doctor. In ten years' time he'll already be getting married and living with his wife and two children. As soon as they will have enough money, they will buy a big house in the country. I know that when he retires, he will have been worked his entire life. Personally, I'm very different. I will have no idea where I'll be doing in five years' time. I hope I'll have doing a job that I will enjoy, but I don't know what that will be at the moment.

1 Read this task. Write some ideas for your story.

- 1 You have decided to enter a short-story competition in an international magazine. The story must end with the following words.

David walked out onto the launch pad towards the spacecraft, taking some last deep breaths of Earth's atmosphere. He turned, waved at the crowd, and then climbed aboard. His lifetime's dream was coming true.

- 2 Ask yourself questions about the ending.
For example:

- Who is David?
- Why is he doing this?
- Where is he going?
- Is he going to return?
- Is he happy about going?
- When and where is this happening?
- How did he get to this point?

2 Write some ideas for the beginning, middle and end of the story.

Beginning: Short section, introducing setting and characters and an 'explosive' or life-changing incident which starts the action of the story.

Middle: The longest section, where characters respond to the incident and start trying to solve the problems that it has created.

End: High point of the story where everything is resolved.
David on launch pad, waving, dream coming true

3 Write your story using your notes.

BREAKS SCIENCE RECORD

13-year-old Jamie Edwards made history when he became the youngest person in the world to create nuclear fusion<sup>1</sup> in the laboratory of his secondary school.

When Jamie first informed his head teacher about his plan to create nuclear fusion in the school, he was stunned. 'I was a little nervous,' he admits. Fortunately, after Jamie gave a presentation about the safety and the benefits, head teacher Jim Hourigan agreed to let the experiment go ahead.

Jamie had always been interested in science and developed a fascination for radiation. He even saved up to buy a Geiger counter, a device that detects radiation, with his pocket money. But his ambition to create nuclear fusion was sparked when he came across a story about Taylor Wilson, a 14-year-old schoolboy from the US who had become the youngest person to produce a small fusion reactor in 2008. 'I looked at it, thought "that looks cool" and decided to have a go,' he says.

He calculated that he needed about £2,000 to build the machine, and first contacted nuclear laboratories, engineering companies and universities to enlist their help. Not surprisingly, they didn't take a 13-year-old seriously. So with the help of his science teacher, he turned to his head teacher and persuaded him to fund the project.

'I was a little nervous,' admitted Jamie's head teacher.

After months of work, and making many of the parts himself, he was ready to try it out just days before his 14th birthday. ... And when he turned on the switch, the Geiger counter registered that fusion had indeed taken place. 'Seeing that purple glow was the best part,' said Edwards. As the neutron detector confirmed it, Jamie knew that he'd become the world's youngest person to achieve nuclear fusion from scratch, using high energy to smash hydrogen atoms together to create helium.

Speaking after the experiment, Jamie was delighted. 'It's quite an achievement. I can't quite believe it!' he said. Scientists around the world are now repeating Jamie's experiment, but on a much bigger scale, in the hope of using it to fuel cheap, environmentally-friendly power stations with the aim of producing clean, carbon-free energy.

Meanwhile, Jamie, who has ambitions to become an engineer or nuclear physicist in the future, remains down-to-earth and is modest about his achievements. As he says, 'None of this would have happened if it wasn't for a science teacher who believed in the dreams of her pupil, and a head teacher who was willing to take a risk to give me the opportunity. So to any young scientists out there, no matter how young, nothing is ever too big for you to try. All you need is curiosity, determination and an open mind.'

<sup>1</sup> NUCLEAR FUSION is a reaction in which two or more atoms collide at a very high speed and form a new type of atom. During the process, energy is produced.

2 Look at Photo a and read the newspaper article below about the boy.

Painting genius Kieron Williamson secured world media attention when his first exhibition fetched £150,000 and sold out in less than 30 minutes. He was seven years old at the time. Following the exhibition, Kieron and his family, from Holt in north Norfolk, featured on international news channels and across the UK's TV shows and newspapers.

Now aged 13, Kieron is already a millionaire and he has been invited to exhibit his work around the world. In many ways, Kieron is a perfectly ordinary boy – he loves being outdoors, playing football and riding his bike fast. But his talent for painting has changed the Williamson family forever. Keith and Michelle, his parents, work hard to ensure the pressures do not mount up and that Kieron has a balanced life. Nevertheless, he no longer attends school and is educated at home. And he is aware that he is a provider for his family.

Child prodigies are more common in music and drama than in fine art, but either way the transition to adulthood can be a tough one. Accomplished as Kieron's paintings are, part of their appeal is undoubtedly the story of precocious talent that goes with them. If he is still doing similar work when he's 25, it may prompt a different reaction.

3 Write about Kieron for the task below. Make notes first.

- b the reasons people join .....
- c the youngest member of Mensa 1 .....
- d the kind of people who join .....
- e the aims of Mensa .....

Two-year-old boy joins Mensa

Adam Kirby's parents realised he was different when he started reading at the age of nine months. By the age of one, he could recognise countries by their shape and put them in the right place on a puzzle made for adults. At two, he could spell over 100 words and count to over 1,000 in English and up to 20 in Spanish and Japanese. He even taught himself to use the toilet after reading a book on it given to him by a family friend.

Adam was so advanced that his parents decided to test his IQ. (1) ..... He was then invited to join the high IQ society Mensa, the youngest boy ever to join at two years and five months old.

Mensa is the largest and oldest high-IQ society in the world. It was founded in England in 1946 by Roland Berrill, a barrister, and Dr Lance Ware, a scientist. (2) ..... Race, colour, nationality, age, politics, and educational or social background are irrelevant.

In order to become a member, Adam took the Stanford-Binet test which measures reasoning, knowledge, visual-spatial processing and memory. Mensa requires members to have an IQ that falls in the top 2% of the population. The average IQ is between 85 and 114, while anyone with an IQ above 160 is classed as an 'extraordinary genius'. (3) .....

Mensa states that it has three main purposes: to identify and advance human intelligence for the benefit of humanity; to encourage research in the nature, characteristics and uses of intelligence; and to promote stimulating intellectual and social opportunities for its members. (4) ..... The organisation offers support for parents and teachers of gifted children, as well as a website that offers games, activities and puzzles. There are scholarships that make it possible for talented students to go to college and university, too.

The other advantage of being a member is that it provides an opportunity for children to meet and connect with others who have an IQ as high as their own. Many bright children have difficulty fitting in with children of their own age. (5) ..... They may even face bullying at school for being the ones who always have the right answers.

The society organises social events for adults, too. (6) ..... There is also a Mind Games event once a year when Mensans spend a weekend playing games. At the end of the weekend, five games are chosen to receive the Mensa stamp of approval. Previous winners have included Trivial Pursuit, Scattergories and Taboo.

Today, there are around 120,000 members of Mensa in 100 countries throughout the world. Children are by far the fastest-growing group, though most members are between the ages of 20 and 60. (7) ..... Some Mensans are poor; some are millionaires, and the range of occupations is staggering. Some members are very successful, such as Sir Clive Sinclair, the inventor of the pocket calculator, John McAfee, who designed anti-virus software, and the author Isaac Asimov. There are celebrities too, like Nolan Gould, who plays Luke in the TV series Modern Family, and sports stars and musicians. But there are also Mensans who are truck drivers, police officers and caretakers.

As Mensans are keen to point out, intelligence is something you are born with. (8) ..... However, having a high IQ doesn't necessarily make a good student so, although Adam may find it easier to learn, his future will depend on how hard he works, just like any other child his age.

3 Read the text again. Complete the gaps with sentences A-H.

- A They learn more quickly and may have different interests.
- B Anyone can achieve a high level of knowledge if they have access to the right information and want to learn, but IQ cannot be changed.
- C They discovered that he had a score of 141 – higher than many US presidents.
- D Adam's score of 141 places him just four points short of the 'genius' category.
- E They come from all walks of life.
- F Members are able to get together and talk.
- G The word 'Mensa' means 'table' in Latin, and was chosen because Mensa is a round-table society.
- H In the case of Adam, it may help him to get a better education.

Use of English

2 Read the article and circle the correct alternative.

- 1 Carolien lived without money because she had to/wanted to.
- 2 She managed/didn't manage to live without it for a year.
- 3 The experiment was a positive/negative experience overall.

In today's society, we have to have money. Or do we? A few brave individuals have tried living without money for a time and the results have been quite surprising. Carolien Hoogland is one of these people.

1 WHY GIVE UP MONEY?

On New Year's Eve 2009, Carolien wrapped her purse in a newspaper and didn't open it again for a year. The 30-something academic researcher from Rotterdam was starting an experiment to see if it was possible to live outside the conventional economic system. She wanted to try living in a more stimulating and fulfilling way. She also believed that we should try to preserve the environment for future generations through sustainable living.

COULD YOU LIVE WITHOUT MONEY?

2 CREATIVE ALTERNATIVES

Carolien made careful plans before starting her experiment. She contacted an energy company and they agreed to supply her gas and electricity for a year in return for research on their green products. She managed to cover her food needs by making bartering agreements with a restaurant, a farm and a shop. In exchange, she worked on various projects, such as creating an education programme about food.

3 THE REACTIONS

Initially, the shop was reluctant to get involved because they said they couldn't afford to. She had to persuade them that they didn't need to pay her but could give her what food they could spare. Meanwhile, the dance studio where Carolien took tango classes allowed her to continue her classes and in return she distributed publicity for them. And instead of going to restaurants, Carolien cooked a meal every week and invited her friends. They would bring drinks or a dessert, and Carolien's home became a meeting place for social gatherings.

4 THE TEST

People have asked Carolien if she ever felt like giving up. She admits that on one occasion she did when she was invited to visit friends in Berlin where she didn't have her usual barter system in place. Although they said she didn't have to pay for anything, she felt dependent on her friends. One afternoon, she went to an ATM and withdrew some money so that she could buy them an ice cream. It was the only time she spent money though, and when she returned to Rotterdam, she carried on as before.

5 LOOKING BACK

Carolien's project ended at the beginning of 2011 and she reluctantly started using money again. During the 12 months, she found that her quality of life had actually improved. 'Life became so much simpler in a nice way, it was as if the buzz of a thousand different choices a day disappeared,' she says. She found that she didn't need to buy things to be happy. Instead, she needed people, and as a result her relationships with the people around her became deeper. Carolien continues to live in a sustainable way; she cycles everywhere and doesn't fly, she buys second-hand furniture and wears clothes given to her by friends.

4 Read the text and then write what Sharon should have done differently yesterday. Use ought to, should or shouldn't have done.

Sharon had a bad morning before school yesterday. Everything went wrong. First of all, she forgot to set her alarm clock so she woke up late. Then she rushed into the kitchen to make some breakfast. She put an egg into a frying pan and it started to cook. Then she went to get her school bag ready. When she came back, the egg was burnt. She threw it away and just had some coffee and toast. Then she went to get her jumper. But she remembered that she washed it the day before and it was still in the washing machine. She looked at her watch. Oh no! It had stopped. It needed a new battery. She looked at the kitchen clock and saw that she had to leave in five minutes. So she switched on the TV and there was a funny programme on. She watched it and then she was late for the bus. She walked as quickly as she could, but she couldn't run because she was wearing flip flops. She missed the bus.

Sharon ought to have set her alarm clock.

What should you do before you start to read a text?

➤ STUDY SKILLS page 95

- 2 Read the advice page again. Are these sentences True (T) or False (F)?

- |  |     |
|--|-----|
| 1 Some people say they have more energy when eating a vegetarian diet. | T/F |
| 2 Vegetarians should eat lentils and beans with broccoli or tomatoes.  | T/F |
| 3 Diet drinks don't contain any sweeteners.                            | T/F |
| 4 Diet sodas make you want to eat more sweet things.                   | T/F |
| 5 The light from technological devices can keep you awake.             | T/F |
| 6 Improving your posture makes you grow.                               | T/F |

IF I EXERCISE, WILL I GROW TALLER?

Many people think so. Some gyms even offer fitness programmes that promise to make you taller. They involve a mixture of Pilates, yoga and stretching, and include hanging upside down like a monkey with weights on your ankles! However, doctors warn that this may hurt your back. The truth is that your height depends on how tall your parents are, and on your posture. In other words, if you stand up straight, you appear taller. But exercise alone has no effect. Astronauts grow by up to five centimetres while in orbit because they don't have the effects of gravity pulling them down. That's the only way to change your height!

I'd like to become a vegetarian, but I've heard that it makes you feel weak and your hair falls out. Is it true?

A balanced vegetarian diet is a perfectly healthy option, and as long as you eat plenty of plants like lentils, beans, nuts and seeds, you'll get the protein you need. A lot of people say they actually have more energy after switching to a vegetarian diet, especially if they cut out processed foods as well. But if you find that your energy levels drop, it probably means you aren't getting enough B12 or iron. These are both found in meat, but lentils, beans and nuts are also excellent sources. If you eat these with vitamin C-rich foods like tomatoes, broccoli and oranges, it will help your body absorb more iron.

I always feel sleepy during the day but not at night. I try to catch up by sleeping more at the weekend, but this doesn't seem to help. What can I do?

All of us have an internal body clock which tells us when to go to sleep and wake up, but what most people don't realise is that the body clock of teenagers runs later than at other ages. If you can't sleep at night, you're probably following your natural tendencies. Having said that, you should try to get between 8 and 11 hours' sleep a night. You won't be able to concentrate or remember what you've learnt unless you get enough sleep. My advice is to avoid surfing the Internet or playing computer games, for example, late at night as exposure to light from electronic displays suppresses sleep-inducing hormones in your body by 22%! It will keep you awake.

I've started drinking diet cola, so can you tell me why I'm putting on weight?

Good question! Diet drinks may seem like a healthy alternative, but in fact, they aren't. Artificial sweeteners have a more intense flavour than real sugar, so if you drink a lot of them, you become less sensitive to sweet food and your body craves more. What's more, these sweeteners trigger insulin, which makes your body think that it needs to store fat, and that leads to weight gain. Researchers in one study found that over ten years, 70% of diet soda drinkers put on weight around their waist. Diet sodas are also associated with high blood pressure and the risk of heart disease.

- 4 She now has businesses in ..... areas of her country.

THE STORY OF BEST AYIORWOTH: STARTING A MICROFINANCE COMPANY AT AGE 19

When Ugandan Best Ayiorwoth had to leave school because her family couldn't afford to pay her tuition fees, it broke her heart. However, this inspired her to start an award-winning microcredit business at just 19 years old that would help hundreds of women and young girls in Uganda.

Having lost her father at the age of eight, and her mother five years later, Best was forced to leave school. 'I never wanted to stop at that point in my education. I would always remind myself that someday when I could, I would ensure that every girl child in my community received the best education they could,' she said.

At the age of 17, Ayiorwoth moved to Kampala, the capital of Uganda, and joined a vocational training school that offered courses such as catering, graphics and web design. She later joined S7 Project, a skills centre, and trained in catering and entrepreneurship, finally getting a job in a restaurant. When she received her first salary, she didn't splash out on clothes or on having fun, she used it as the capital she needed to follow her dream.

She realised that if she could help mothers financially, they would allow their children, especially young girls, to go to school. In her community, if families have to make a choice between sending a son or a daughter to school, they often choose a boy over a girl. In early 2011, Ayiorwoth went back to the Nebbi District and set up the Girls Power Micro-Lending Organisation (GIPOMO). Using her savings, she started to give loans to women to help them build up their small businesses. She charged a 10% interest rate, which she kept reinvesting in GIPOMO. It wasn't long before her initiative caught the attention of her mentor at S7, who gave her an additional loan to increase her business.

Sewing in a market in Uganda

The unique aspect of the organisation is that the women must agree to keep their girl children in school. Provided they do that, they are eligible for a loan. Furthermore, Ayiorwoth explained that if she discovers that the mothers aren't investing in their daughters' education with the income they earn in their business, they will be disqualified from accessing finance from GIPOMO.

So far, GIPOMO has helped many women to start and expand their own businesses, and has kept hundreds of girls in school by supporting their mothers. In 2013, Ayiorwoth won $400 at the African Enterprise Business Challenge and a further $25,000 for first place at the Anzisha Prize, a competition that recognises and celebrates African entrepreneurs under the age of 22 who are using entrepreneurship to solve problems in their communities.

Using a portion of the prize, GIPOMO has already expanded to four different areas in northern Uganda. In five years, she plans to reach 5,000 women in the north of the country, and in ten years, she hopes to launch similar initiatives in different parts of the country, addressing specific local needs. 'Microfinance can never be relevant if it has one model,' she says. 'In one community, it should provide affordable finance for girl education and in another, it should provide affordable finance for land ownership – whatever the challenge the community faces.'

GIPOMO is also launching an Education for Girls fund that will focus on providing no-interest loans to families who want to enrol girls in skills development programmes.

Ayiorwoth wishes she had been able to continue her own education, but she is doing everything possible to develop a new generation of women who are skilled, entrepreneurial and able to contribute to their family's welfare and the education of their daughters.

“ ... I would ensure that every girl child in my community received the best education they could ”

THE YOUNG THEATREGOER – PLAYING A PART IN THE AUDIENCE

Shakespeare's Globe in London

A higher proportion of people go to the theatre than to music concerts or sporting events. And contrary to the common belief that the theatre attracts older audiences, the typical theatregoer these days is between 16 and 19 years old.

These are the findings of a recent survey into developments in the UK's theatre industry. The survey was commissioned by a ticket sales company after it noticed a trend for more theatre sales to young people. The research confirmed that, far from dying out and being replaced by cinema or online entertainment, the theatre is growing in popularity. In fact, 63% of people said that they had attended a theatre performance in the past year. In comparison, only 53% had been to a music concert, and less than half to a sporting event. And the theatre is most popular among teenagers, with 87% saying they had seen a performance.

The appetite for theatre among young people is striking, but what can explain this shift in trends? It seems that many teens are coming to the theatre via participation in drama clubs and acting schools. Others come through their studies, as a rising number of students are studying theatre in higher education. And a further reason may be that the theatre itself has changed beyond all recognition in the past 15 years. While big productions such as The Phantom of the Opera remain popular favourites, most young audiences want to see new shows. The emergence of 'immersive theatre' has played an important part in engaging new audiences.

Immersive theatre performances are more likely to be performed outdoors, in the streets, in car parks or warehouses, than in mainstream theatres. And the audience is not merely passive, but it sometimes moves around and explores the performance space while the play is in progress, and may even be invited to play the part of characters in the play.

New technologies have also had an influence on developments in the theatre. A surprisingly high number of theatregoers, around one in five, write reviews about what they have seen using social media and nearly half of all 16–19-year-olds tweet about the performance they are about to see or have already seen. And the majority are in favour of live streaming of theatre performances.

It seems that the biggest barrier to attendance at theatres, for all age groups, is cost. Having said that, the report also reveals that two-thirds of people want to maintain or increase their theatregoing in the future. It seems that the theatre has managed to reinvent itself to appeal to modern audiences. This art form, which has been around for thousands of years, seems likely to continue and grow for many years to come.

“63% of people said that they had attended a theatre performance in the past year”

A ..... I loved this film, not only because I'm an enthusiastic user of Facebook, but also because of how convincing and believable the storyline was. It didn't seem clichéd, but gripping and true to life. Jesse Eisenberg's portrayal of Mark Zuckerberg, the creator of Facebook, was amazing. The Social Network is among my top ten films ever and I'm not alone in this view – it has won almost every award going.

B ..... When The Social Network was released in 2010, Facebook was the most popular social networking website, with millions of users around the world. It seemed obvious that a film would be made about its creation.

C ..... The Social Network is a hugely enjoyable film that will become a classic. I recommend this film to everyone, whether or not they are Facebook users. If you're not a fan of Facebook, your opinion is sure to change after watching this film.

D ..... Starring Jesse Eisenberg, Andrew Garfield and Justin Timberlake, The Social Network takes place in the early 2000s at Harvard University, the birthplace of the website that eventually became known as Facebook. During the film, friendships are made and broken, jealousy rears its head and lawsuits are filed as the fascinating story of Facebook is played out.

HOW TO SURVIVE A DISASTER

At seven o'clock on the evening of 27th September 1994, the ferry MS Estonia left Tallinn on its way to Stockholm. It never got there.

Six hours into the journey, strong winds caused a door to break open and the ferry started to take on water. In less than an hour, it had sunk, taking most of its passengers and crew with it.

Even given the speed of the tragedy, the stormy sea and the time it took rescuers to reach them, the number of victims was surprisingly high. It seems that many passengers were slow to react to save themselves, even when they were faced with imminent danger.

Why did this happen? John Leach, a survival instructor, has studied the behaviour of people in disasters around the world for several decades. According to Leach, around 75% of people are so bewildered by life-threatening situations that they are unable to think clearly. Only about 15% of people remain calm and are able to make rational decisions. The remaining 10% are so frightened that they are a danger to others.

According to Leach, in the majority of cases, it's a failure to react that puts people at a higher risk. One of the reasons for this lack of reaction is peer pressure. Many people are worried about responding to an alarm when no one around them does.

To illustrate this point, a group of people were invited to take part in an experiment. They were taken to a waiting room, and researchers blew smoke into the room from under the door. In the first part of the experiment, participants were alone, and in this case 75% of them left to report the fire. But when there was a group of actors in the room who were instructed not to react to the smoke, only 10% got up to leave. The overwhelming majority stayed, even when there was so much smoke that they could hardly see.

“ Many people are worried about responding to an alarm when no one around them does. ”

Another reason for passivity in the face of an emergency is that people find it difficult to adapt to a stressful situation. When disasters occur, events move quickly, but stress slows down the ability to think. The only way to overcome this problem, according to survival experts, is to prepare in advance. For example, by knowing what the safety procedures are, a person is able to act automatically without having to make a decision in a critical moment. For this reason, experts stress the importance of knowing where fire exits are and how to evacuate a building, and listening to safety instructions when flying.

In areas of the world where natural disasters occur, being prepared is a priority. In Japan, which is particularly prone to earthquakes, every precaution is taken to make sure that children know what to do when a quake occurs. The measures include monthly drills in which alarms sound and children retreat under their desks. If they are in the playground, they are taught to run to the centre to avoid being hit by falling debris.

And the local fire department takes groups of children into earthquake simulation machines so that they know what it feels like.

Thankfully, it's highly unlikely that any of us will ever find ourselves in a disaster situation. But even in the case of small emergencies, it's been shown that fast reactions can make all the difference to an outcome.

4 LISTENING 21 Listen to two students discussing the information in the pie charts and graph. What do they decide is the biggest problem we face?

Number of reported disasters

Source: Oxfam, EM-DAT

5 LISTENING 21 Listen again. Find eight mistakes in the summary. Write the correct information.

The graph shows that there has been a gradual increase in the number of weather-related disasters in recent years. The number doubled between 1980 and 2010. The biggest decrease was in the number of storms. If we look at the pie charts, we can see a fall in the number of windstorms between 2012 and 2013, too. There was a sharp increase in the number of floods between 1980 and 2010, and the number rose between 2012 and 2013, but the number of droughts stayed the same. The number of geophysical disasters rose significantly between 1980 and 2010. The pie charts also show that there was a big change in the number of earthquakes and volcanic eruptions between 2012 and 2013.

- 1 Read the report. Do you agree with scientist Jeff McNeely's opinion that the tsunami was a man-made disaster?

The 2004 Tsunami and Tourism

The building of coastal resorts and the destruction of natural protection may have contributed to the enormous loss of life from killer tsunamis that hit the shores of the Indian Ocean after an earthquake, an environmental expert claims.

Jeff McNeely, chief scientist of the Swiss-based World Conservation Union (IUCN) said the tsunami was 'nothing new for nature' in a geologically active region.

'What made this a disaster is that people have started to occupy part of the landscape that they shouldn't have occupied,' he said. '50 years ago, the coastline was not as densely occupied as now by tourist hotels,' he added.

'The mangroves were all along the coasts where there are shallow waters. They offered protection against things like tsunamis. Over the last 20–30 years, they were cleared by people who didn't have the long-term knowledge of why these mangroves should have been saved.'

The same thing has been happening with the coral reefs that also provided protection to the coast, he explained.

'When a tsunami comes in, it first hits the coral reef which slows it down, then it hits the mangroves which further slows it down. It may get through that, but by then a lot of the energy has already been dissipated,' McNeely said.

Reading

- 1 Read the article about Sam Cossman, an explorer. Choose the best headline for the article.
- a On dangerous ground? Filming from inside a volcano
  - b The adventures of a modern-day Indiana Jones
  - c Explorer uses drones to see inside a volcano

Sam Cossman is standing at the edge of a lake of lava. It's a stormy August day on the remote island of Ambrym. Out of the 2,000-degree pool of fire comes a cloud of poisonous gas that almost knocks him off his feet.

The heat is coming from a lava lake in the centre of the volcano called Marum, part of the island nation of Vanuatu in the South Pacific Ocean. Some molten lava lands dangerously close to Cossman and his protective face shield begins to melt.

Millions of people have seen this scene online. Cossman filmed his experience with the help of co-explorer George Kourounis, and a handful of cameras. He edited the film on the flight home to San Francisco, uploaded it that day with the title Volcano Diver and forwarded it to friends and family. The next morning, he was called by several news channels and newspapers.

Over the next few weeks, Cossman appeared on TV shows, but then he went back to his job as president of a business he'd started in Silicon Valley, designing software for adventure companies. Soon, though, he was receiving more offers to explore the world and create films.

Cossman had dreamt of being an explorer since he was seven years old. He'd done the volcano dive for the personal thrill, but he saw an opportunity to do similar activities professionally. He quit his job to become, as he calls himself, 'the Indiana Jones of the modern world'. Not everyone agreed with his decision, and he admits that it was more scary than any volcano.

With the help of financing from sponsors, Cossman returned to Marum volcano in December of 2014. He had with him a team of scientists, videographers and drone operators, and new high-tech equipment. Clouds of ash over the volcano make it impossible to see inside the volcano using satellite images, but with cameras attached to drones, he was able to take thousands of images. These have since been used to create a three-dimensional map of the volcano, the first of its kind. It is hoped that the data collected from the rock samples they gathered will not only help scientists to understand volcanic activity, but also the conditions that make life possible in extreme environments on Earth – and possibly on other planets.

While he was aware of the danger as he stood just 15 metres away from a lake of lava the size of a football field, Cossman admits that it was an incredible experience. 'Listening to the deafening splashes of molten rock was like listening to the heartbeat of the planet', he said. It made him contemplate his own mortality.

Inspired by the experience and the success of his recent video, Cossman now hopes to start his own company and conduct similar projects in other extreme environments. He believes that we are at the beginning of a new age of exploration, one that benefits from the use of modern technology. 'I'm mapping out expeditions that have elements of adventure that tie into topical themes like climate change or philanthropic issues – plus an element of danger and amazing videographic potential.'

- 2 Read the text again and choose the best answer, a, b or c.

- 1 Cossman made his first video ...
  - a for TV and news channels.
  - b for his family and friends.
  - c because he loved exploring.

  - c his job wasn't very exciting.
- 3 People know very little about the volcano because ...
  - a it's too hot to get close to it.
  - b the ash makes it impossible for satellites to film inside.
  - c the island is remote so people don't usually visit it.
- 4 During the expedition to Marum, they ...
  - a collected samples from the volcano.
  - b created a 3D map of the volcano.
  - c discovered what makes life possible in extreme environments.
- 5 While he was filming inside the volcano, Cossman ...
  - a was too excited to feel afraid.
  - b felt that he was close to the centre of the Earth.
  - c thought that he was going to die.
- 6 In the future, Cossman wants to ...
  - a make films for the new company that he has started.
  - b make documentaries about his journeys.
  - c use technology to find out more about the Earth.

DIGITAL LEARNERS

Today's young people are often referred to as the digital generation. (1) ..... For many parents and teachers, this culture is unfamiliar and sometimes confusing. So to help them understand it better, the Digital Generation Project was launched.

The project is the brainchild of George Lucas, the film director best known for the Star Wars and Indiana Jones films. He remembers feeling bored at school, so in 1991, he set up The George Lucas Educational Foundation, which is designed to encourage and celebrate innovation in schools. Edutopia, the foundation's website, publishes documentary films and resources for parents and teachers. (2) .....

Edutopia spent a year researching the digital lives of young people from different parts of the United States and from different backgrounds. Portraits of ten of these students between the ages of eight and 18 are published on the website. (3) ..... Teachers and parents also talk about how they address the challenges of keeping pace and supporting these digital learners.

As Milton Chen, executive director of the foundation explains, 'We want to help educators and parents understand these new tools and behaviours and consider how they can be applied in new ways of teaching and learning.'

One of the young people whose portraits appear on the website is Cameron. At the age of 11, Cameron already produces his own videos. (4) ..... Cameron attends an after-school tech club where he's making a documentary film about his school. Like many young people of his generation, Cameron has entrepreneurial skills. To earn money during the summer holiday, he plans to email all his friends and neighbours offering to make them slide shows of their family photos set to music for a reasonable price.

14-year-old Virginia enjoys playing games, texting and going on social network sites. (5) ..... At school, she learnt to create and edit videos. One of these involved making a video of scenes from Romeo and Juliet, accompanied by rap songs, which she made for a literature class. For Virginia, technology is about making life easier – she makes flashcards and games to help her study. (6) ..... In her free time, she teaches a class in digital citizenship for younger students. The class, which aims to show students how to stay safe online, uses a virtual world that she helped to create.

Justin attends a technology high school where he learns advanced 3-D modelling, simulation and animation. He combines his passions for gaming and film-making to create games and videos in his free time. What appeals to him most about technology is the opportunity it gives him to be creative. (7) ..... Justin admits spending about three hours every evening online, either playing games, chatting or working on one of his projects. But he is also an avid reader, and makes time to volunteer in his free time. Every Saturday, he mentors underprivileged children and shares his skills with them.

What the Digital Generation Project shows is just how immersed young people are in digital technology. They are using it to play and socialise more than any previous generation. But they are also using it to learn new skills, develop their creativity and contribute to their communities.

Woman: Personally, I think it's true that technology has caused a generation gap, but not in a negative way. I think technology has created differences, but not really problems.
(a)

Man: No, sorry, I'm not.
(b)

Woman: What I mean is that I think that technology is developing so rapidly that it's inevitable that there are differences. I just don't believe that it causes problems.

Man: I see, but I think there is a difference between how generations view technology.

Woman: OK.

(c) you're saying that technology is more important for young people.

Man: Yes, that's exactly what I mean. I think people of all generations use technology, but for younger people, it's a priority.

Woman: That's true, but young people aren't using technology to rebel. It's just that it's something they've always known.

(d)

Man: Yes, I do, though I think that there are sometimes disagreements ...

1 Match the halves to make headlines.

- |                            |                                |
|----------------------------|--------------------------------|
| 1 Teenager made to tidy up | a with nothing                 |
| 2 Teenage millionaire      | b starts new job               |

A Like many teenagers, 19-year-old Ryan Kitching ignored his mother's pleas to clean his bedroom. When he finally gave in, he found a winning lottery ticket worth £52,981.

One morning, he knew that he'd be in trouble if he didn't tidy his room and put away his clothes. As he cleared up the mess, he came across 12 old lottery tickets that he had bought at the supermarket where he worked. He was about to throw them away but, as he was going shopping with his mother anyway, he decided to take them to the supermarket and check the numbers.

At the store, Ryan was told that he had 'won big'. He had to phone the lottery organisers to find out exactly how much. 'When I gave her the last number of the serial code, she said I had won £52,981. I just couldn't believe it,' he said.

Ryan is still not sure what to do with his winnings. 'It would take me four or five years to earn this amount of money and now I've got it all at once,' he said. His father wants him to invest the money and use it as a deposit to buy a house. But Ryan is considering a trip to Mallorca with his friends. He also wants to help his younger brother to buy a car.

Ryan has no plans to quit his job or stop his work with charity First Response, which trains volunteers to provide emergency medical aid. 'It's a great charity and I'm planning on donating some of the winnings to them,' he said.

* to win big (slang) – win a lot of money or a big prize

2 Read the articles. Choose a headline for each article from 1.

- A .....
B .....

B When Callie Rogers won the lottery at the age of 16, she thought she was the luckiest person alive. She didn't realise that it would almost ruin her life.

Callie was Britain's youngest ever winner when she matched all six numbers and won the £1.9 million jackpot. She gave up her job as a shop assistant and spent the next few years living the high life. She bought houses and cars for herself and her friends and family. She splashed out on expensive holidays, designer clothes and cosmetic surgery.

But far from making her happy, Callie fell into depression. She didn't have a job and she felt lonely and vulnerable. People would act like her best friend but she didn't know who to trust.

Ten years later, she is left with just £2,000 in the bank. She's broke, but she says, she's never felt happier. Callie now lives in a modest house with her partner and has three young children. 'We're a normal family,' she says. 'My life revolves around the kids and, if they want something expensive, they wait for birthdays and Christmas. I'm glad they'll grow up knowing the value of money.'

“It was too much money for someone so young.”

If she hadn't met her partner, her life would probably be very different. He didn't know she had been a millionaire when he met her, and didn't find out until much later. The relationship was to change her life for the better.

Now, looking back, Callie believes she was too young to win the lottery, and wishes the money had been kept for her when she was older. 'I don't think 16-year-olds should be eligible to play the lottery,' she says. 'It was too much money for someone so young. Even if you say your life won't change, it does. It nearly broke me, but thankfully, now I'm stronger.'

3 Read the news stories again. Are these statements True (T), False (F) or is the information Not Mentioned (NM)?

- |  |            |
|--|------------|
| 1 Ryan didn't know that he had lottery tickets in his room.                    | T / F / NM |

SKY SHOW

This week, despite the bitter cold, many of us have gone out into our gardens thinking we (a) ..... to see amazing events in the sky above us. Astronomers had told us that we (b) ..... see a solar eclipse on Monday. But in my part of the country, it was too cloudy to see the Sun, with or without an eclipse. On Tuesday, my plan was that I was (c) ..... to look for Venus, Uranus and Jupiter, all of which are closer to us than usual. Unfortunately, just as I was (d) ..... to go outside to search the sky for these planets, it began to snow, so once again we couldn't witness anything but the reality of life on Earth. Yesterday, I tried again. The astronomers promised there (e) ..... to be a meteor shower and the weather forecasters promised that we (f) ..... have clear skies. They were both right and I don't know which event was more exciting: having clear skies here or the spectacular meteor shower!

3 Complete the conditional sentences with the correct form of the verb.

Reading

1 Read two newspaper articles. Which section from a newspaper is each story from?

world news ☐

business ☐

technology ☐

sport ☐

CHANGING PLACES

The editor of a regional daily has handed over his job for a day to an apprentice as part of a campaign in partnership with the National Apprenticeship Service to boost the local economy and to help young people into work.

Brian Aitken from Newcastle's The Journal has thrown himself into a drive to find 100 apprenticeships in 100 days by trading places with a young engineering apprentice. He swapped his editor's chair with 20-year-old Liam Rogerson, who is carrying out a three-year apprenticeship with Newcastle's School of Marine Science and Technology.

During the role-swap, Brian found out about the inner workings of wind turbines and wave simulation tanks. He said, 'I was absolutely blown away by the kind of high-tech work being carried out.'

Meanwhile, Liam was introduced to the world of deadlines, headlines and fonts. One of Liam's tasks was to choose the story that would appear on the front page of the newspaper. He chose a story about the city council's plan to replace charity collection bins at recycling centres with bins of their own.

Afterwards, Brian said, 'The day reminded me how important it is to help North-east businesses find and train the right people. I am determined that The Journal's campaign to find 100 apprentices in 100 days will play a key role in that.'

And Liam said his day at The Journal, which took place as part of National Apprenticeship Week, had given him an insight into how the newspaper was put together. He said 'There is an incredible amount of work that needs to be done before an edition can go to press and it was interesting to get a feel for all the different departments that are involved, including the news desk, production and the features department. It did make a career in journalism look exciting, but I'm not sure I would be happy with the long hours.'

A number of regional papers have held similar successful campaigns to create apprenticeships.

The Sound of Silence

The days of people shouting into mobile phones on buses could soon be a thing of the past with 'silent sounds', a new technology that transforms lip movements into a computer-generated voice for the listener at the other end of the phone.

The device, developed by the Karlsruhe Institute of Technology (KIT), uses 'electromyography'.

This process monitors tiny muscular movements that happen when we speak and converts them into electrical signals that can then be turned into speech, without a sound uttered.

Michael Wand, a scientist at KIT, says this technology, which they have worked many years to develop, opens up a whole range of applications, from helping people who have lost their voice due to illness or accident, to being able to share confidential information – as long as there are no lip-readers around, of course.

Furthermore, because the electrical signals are universal, they can be immediately transformed into the language of the phone user's choice. You can silently utter a sentence in your own language, and the listener can hear the sentence translated into another language. It appears as if you have spoken in a foreign language. This works effectively for languages like English, French and German, but it fails to function properly for languages like Chinese, where different tones can hold different meanings.

The engineers have got the device working to 99 per cent efficiency, so the mechanical voice at the other end of the phone gets one word in 100 wrong, explained Michael Wand. 'But we're working to overcome the remaining technical difficulties. In five, maybe ten years, this will be useable, everyday technology,' he said.

2 Read the articles again. Are these statements True (T), False (F) or is the information Not Mentioned (NM)?

- |  |            |  |            |
|--|------------|--|------------|
| 1 The project to find 100 apprenticeships in 100 days was launched by The Journal . | T / F / NM | 6 The device for mobile phones allows people to send text messages, which are translated into a voice message on the listener's phone. | T / F / NM |
| 2 Brian was impressed by the students' work at the university.                             | T / F / NM | 7 Scientists have been working on the device for many years.   | T / F / NM |

| 4 Liam thinks that he would enjoy a job as a news editor in the future.                    | T / F / NM | 9 The device allows the user to translate their message into any other language they want.   | T / F / NM |
| 5 Editors from other newspapers have swapped roles with students, too.                     | T / F / NM | 10 The scientist who developed the device expects the technology to be in everyday use in the future.                                  | T / F / NM |

3 Read the article. Which adjective describes the story?

- a amusing ☐ b hilarious ☐ c moving ☐ d thrilling ☐

A good Samaritan has given a homeless man an e-reader so that he can pursue his love of reading.

The man, who wishes to remain anonymous, often went on business trips to Las Vegas, and (1) ..... always see the homeless man reading one book repeatedly.

During his last visit, he started a conversation with the homeless man, (2) ..... name is Paul. He asked him if he (3) ..... reading and why he always read the same book. Paul explained that he only had one book so he read it again and again.

The man remembered (4) ..... his e-reader in his bag that morning, and in a kind gesture, decided to give it to Paul and teach him how to scroll (5) ..... to choose a book and swipe the screen to turn a page. Paul was delighted with the device, which has about 300 books. The man also left his address in (6) ..... Paul wanted more reading material and promised to provide it free of charge. He said that he hoped the story would encourage other people to do something kind as well.

4 Read the story again. Decide which answer (A, B, C or D) best fits each gap.

- |           |           |          |           |

Listening

5 LISTENING 27 Listen to a brother and sister talking about technology. Choose the correct answer.

- The students in the video gave up their phones because ...
  - their teacher thought they were addicted to them.
  - they had been discussing their media habits in class.
  - one of the students suggested it.
- The students in the video ...
  - were given other phones to use for a week.
  - weren't allowed to make calls or send text messages.
  - could use computers but not phones.
- During the week, the students ...
  - hated being without their phones.
  - didn't know what to do with their time.
  - found they did more things.
- When the week was finished, they ...
  - decided to use their phones less.
  - felt happier because they got their phones back.
  - didn't want their phones back.

6 Read this task.

Your school magazine has asked you to write a report about the media you and your friends use to watch, read or listen to the news, say what you think of news media and recommend how it could be improved for the use of teenagers.

7 Write your report.

Paragraph 1: Introduction, stating the aim of the report

Paragraph 2: Description of the current situation

Paragraph 3: Your opinion

Paragraph 4: Conclusion – give your opinion, repeating the strongest point made in 3 and giving a recommendation

COMMON MISTAKES

8 Correct the mistakes in the sentences. In some sentences, there is more than one mistake.

- The students, that are from London, stopped to use their phones.
- Have you got any idea why did they do it?
- I was to buy a new phone, but my parents gave me one for my birthday.
- This story made the headlines, wasn't it?
- Don't forget backing your documents every evening.

Unit 1

VOCABULARY: USING A DICTIONARY

When you look up words in a dictionary, do not just look at the first meaning that appears. Many English words have more than one meaning and can have more than one form (e.g. they can be a noun and a verb), or they can be part of phrases with different meanings. In a print dictionary, look at the introduction to find out how it gives information about types of word. Getting to know the International Phonetic Alphabet (IPA) helps you to work out the pronunciation of new words. Online dictionaries often allow you to hear the spoken word.

SPEAKING: SPEAKING ENGLISH WELL

To speak English well we need a balance between accuracy and fluency. Accuracy means how correct our use of grammar is when we speak. Fluency means whether we can speak continuously in English without stopping frequently to think about what we want to say next.

Unit 2

VOCABULARY: LEARNING PHRASAL VERBS

Phrasal verbs consist of a verb and one or two particles (prepositions or adverbs). The meaning of phrasal verbs is not always easy to guess from the verb or particles. Use a dictionary, but be careful because the same phrasal verb can have different meanings. Read the examples and check the context to make sure you have found the relevant meaning.

WRITING: ORGANISING YOUR WRITING

When you have thought of the basic ideas that you are going to include in your essay, stop and organise them into logical paragraphs. You should do this before you start to write, not while you are writing.

Unit 3

GRAMMAR: WORKING ON MISTAKES

When you make mistakes with grammar, check to see if the mistakes are generally mistakes with the form, spelling or meaning of the structure. Work constructively on your mistakes to improve. Keep a section in your notebook for recurring mistakes and refer to them when necessary. Make full use of the resources provided for further practice.

LISTENING: PREDICTING BEFORE LISTENING

Before listening exercises, it's a good idea to predict the content of the text. Think about anything you know about the topic. Look at any illustrations, titles or questions. They can all give you clues about what you are going to hear.

VOCABULARY: KEEPING VOCABULARY RECORDS

When you make a record of a new word, write down anything special you need to know about it. Does it have a positive or negative meaning? Can you add a prefix to make the negative form? Is the word informal or is it only usually used in its written form? Is there anything special about the pronunciation? Can you group the word with other, similar words? All these things can help you to remember the word and use it correctly.

WRITING: REVIEWING YOUR WRITING

When you finish writing a text in English, check it carefully. Have you answered the question completely? Are there any obvious mistakes? Is it easy to understand the ideas and information in your text?

Unit 5

READING: SKIMMING AND SCANNING

Skimming and scanning are two different ways of reading a text. When we skim a text, we read it quickly to get a general, overall idea of the text. We usually read the beginning and then focus briefly on the first lines of the other paragraphs. When we scan a text, we are looking for specific information. After locating the key words we are looking for, we read the relevant sections. We usually skim a text first, and then scan for specific information.

WRITING: MAKING A PLAN

When you write, always make a plan. It helps you to decide exactly what you are going to say and what order to say it in before you begin. This makes your text much more coherent. Refer back to your plan as you are writing.

Unit 6

READING: ACTIVATING YOUR KNOWLEDGE

Before you read, look at any visual clues about the content and have a quick think about what you know about the subject. This can help you to understand more when you actually read the text.

SPEAKING: USING FILLERS

When your mind goes blank in a conversation and you can't think what to say, use fillers to give yourself time to decide what you're going to say next. Use Err, The thing is, Well, You know ... It can also be useful to use the questions: What? Who? Where? Why? When?, etc. as prompts when you are trying to think of basic things to say.

READING: GUESSING MEANING FROM CONTEXT

When there are new words in a text, look at the context. The sentences before and after can help you guess the meaning. The words directly before and after should help you to decide the type of word. Break the word down into parts. Do you know any of the parts? Is the word similar to a word in your language? Remember that it isn't always necessary to understand every word in order to understand the text.

LISTENING: LISTENING FOR GENERAL UNDERSTANDING

Use the first listening to get a general idea of the text. Don't worry about understanding every little thing. When you listen the second time, check and confirm your ideas and listen for more details. In the same way as skimming and scanning a reading text, it helps to know beforehand what information you are listening for.

SPEAKING: COPING WHEN YOU CAN'T REMEMBER A WORD

When you don't know a word or can't remember how to say a word in the middle of the conversation, don't panic. Explain what you want to say using other, simpler words to convey the meaning. Whatever you do, don't stop speaking and don't just say the word in your language.

WRITING: EDITING YOUR WRITING

When you finish your first version of a text, check for mistakes and then edit your text. Look for unnecessary repetition, irrelevant information or confusing examples and details. Cut them from your text so that it becomes clearer and easier to follow. Make sure your writing follows a logical order, and check this against your plan if you have one.

Unit 9

READING: UNDERSTANDING REFERENCING WORDS

When you read a text, pay special attention to reference words like this, that, there, it, they. Look backwards and forwards in the text to find out what the words refer to. This will help you to get a better understanding of the text.

SPEAKING: USING SENTENCE STRESS

Remember that sentence stress is important when you are speaking in English. By stressing important words in the sentence, you make your meaning clear. Your aim is for listeners to be able to understand you without them having to make a special effort. Paying attention to natural stresses when listening to different types of spoken English is good practice.

Unit 10

VOCABULARY: LEARNING COLLOCATIONS

Collocations are typical combinations of words. Learning collocations helps you to speak and write English in a more natural way. Make a note of these when you learn new words and add to them as you come across different examples.

WRITING: PLANNING AND CHECKING

The two golden rules of writing are:

- 1 never begin writing a text without planning.
- 2 never hand in a text without checking.
