It's two o'clock in the morning. Rob is in his bedroom, but he's reading a novel. He reads when he's nervous. Why is he nervous? There's a new teacher at school. She's very strict, and Rob doesn't like Chemistry. It's very difficult for him. Knock knock! That's the bedroom door. "Rob, are you OK?" "Yes, Sue, don't worry." "Please, Rob, close your book and go to sleep and relax. Think about nice things." "OK, Sue."

Now Rob is at school. He can't remember the dream, but he's relaxed. "Why am I not nervous?" That's strange. It's time for Chemistry. "Good morning, people. Close your books and get ready for a short test." "Oh, my God! A Chemistry test." Rob is nervous again. Now Rob is reading the test. "Strange, I understand everything! I know the answers." Rob is relaxed again.

At home, Rob is telling his family about this. "You see, Rob, when you think about nice things, the results are very good," Sue is telling Rob. Mmmm ... Is that true? What do you think?
